

(18/4/1906)

LONDON BOROUGH OF LEWISHAM
LIBRARY SERVICE

Author

Title

BOOK STORE

Books or discs must be returned on or before the last date stamped on label or on card in book pocket. Books or discs can be renewed by telephone, letter or personal call unless required by another reader. After library hours use the Ansafone service (01-698 7347). For hours of opening and charges see notices at the above branch, but note that all lending departments close at 1 pm on Wednesday and all libraries are closed on Sundays, Good Friday, Christmas Day, Bank Holidays and Saturdays prior to Bank Holidays.

METROPOLITAN
SPECIAL COLLECTION

SOME RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

Oxford University Extension Gazette, July, 1894.

"Visitors to Oxford will welcome the appearance of a new edition of Alden's Sixpenny Guide. We have formerly commended this handy little volume, and are now able to do so even more warmly, as the careful editor has corrected his description of Oxford in view of recent additions to our buildings, and the further light which has been thrown on the antiquity of part of the Cathedral."

Oxford Magazine, Nov. 14, 1894.

"Mr. Alden's Guide . . . is accurate in its descriptive information, convenient in form, and adequately provided with illustrations."

Oxford Times, May 26, 1894.

"The whole work has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date, a variety of new illustrations has been added, and the Guide continues to be the best at its price."

Publishers' Circular, June 30, 1894.

"'ALDEN'S Oxford Guide' is all that can be desired. It contains sufficient detail about the various places of interest for the ordinary visitor, it is arranged on a clear and easy plan, and has innumerable illustrations. The visitor who takes this book with him to 'do' Oxford may be said to possess an intelligent companion."

Bookseller, June and July, 1894.

"We are glad to note the appearance of another edition of this excellent Guide-book, showing careful preparation and revision. Visitors can hardly have in the same short compass a more useful handbook to the many objects of antiquarian or academic interest for which the City and University are so justly renowned."

Reading Mercury, Aug. 29, 1891.

"ALDEN'S GUIDE TO OXFORD is a cheap and remarkably well arranged aid to the visitor who wishes to inspect the venerable and unique objects of interest which the city affords. The attention of the stranger is directed to everything worth seeing, in the most concise way and without unnecessary description or praise. The colleges, university and city buildings, and the river up to Nuneham are described in the same able way, aided by illustrations; and a more compendious and satisfactory guide could hardly be produced."

From the Rev. Canon Driver, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew, Christ Church, Oxford. July 27, 1894.

"The Guide, both by its contents and its arrangement, is admirably adapted to meet the needs of visitors."

* * * These testimonials confirm the favourable opinions pronounced by the Press and leading public men on all the earlier editions.

BLENHEIM PALACE.

BLENHEIM Palace and Gardens are open to the Public on Mondays and Thursdays from 12 to 6 ; and on Saturdays from 12 to 4. The fee for admission is 2s. ; "Special parties" by rail are admitted on payment of 1s. each, through Messrs. T. Cook & Son, Agents. Cheap return tickets are issued by the 12.10 and 3.15 trains from Oxford ; returning 3.15 and 8 p.m. Fare 1s. The Park is open free daily.

VISITORS TO OXFORD

ARE respectfully invited to call at the Publishing House of Alden's Oxford Guide, 35, CORN-MARKET STREET, on the site of the old 'Bocardo' at the North Gate. In the coloured Map at the end of this book the exact locality is marked with a cross in a circle, which will be found near the centre of the map.

Visitors will there find a collection of the best Guide-Books, Maps, Works relating to Oxford, Photographs and Etchings of Oxford and Neighbourhood, in great variety and at moderate prices.

* * * SPECIAL NOTICE.—For the convenience of Tourists whose time during the day is occupied in sight-seeing, we are happy to arrange to send parcels of Photographs, &c., to their Hotels, for inspection and choice during hours when the shops are closed.

Any Views or Books not in stock are carefully procured without delay.
Information is at all times gladly afforded to strangers.

ELLISTON & CAVELL

Telegraphic Address: "ELLISTONS, OXFORD." Local Telephone: No. 36.

DRAPERS, MERCERS, COSTUMIERS, MILLINERS, LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S OUTFITTERS, AND COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHERS. FUNERAL DIRECTORS.
Wedding Trousseaux. Layettes. Indian and Colonial Outfits.
CLOSE ON SATURDAYS AT 5 O'CLOCK.
9, 10, 11, & 12, Magdalen Street, OXFORD.

RANDOLPH HOTEL, OXFORD.

In the Centre of the City.

Opposite the Martyrs' Memorial.

The only modern-built Hotel in Oxford close to the Colleges and Public Buildings. A few minutes' walk from the Railway Stations, River, Theatre, &c.

Handsome Suites of Rooms. Ladies' Coffee Room. Ball Room.
Billiard Rooms. Smoking Rooms. General Drawing Room, and every convenience.

LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY.

A Night Porter in attendance. Charges Moderate.

See No. 57, page 95.]

ADDRESS: THE MANAGER.

X COLIN LUNN, X
CIGAR MERCHANT
(From Cambridge).

Established Half a Century.

EGYPTIAN, TURKISH, AND AMERICAN CIGARETTE DEPÔT.

A large Stock on hand of specially selected

STRAIGHT GRAINED BRIARS.

X 23, HIGH STREET. X

The Swiss Café
15, BROAD STREET, OXFORD.

Extensive Dining Rooms have recently been added to this noted Establishment.

Table d'Hôte from 1 to 3, at 2/6.

DINNERS FROM 6 TILL 9 O'CLOCK. FRENCH CHEF.

Picnics and Parties supplied.

WINE TO BE HAD ON THE PREMISES.

J. G. BUOL, Proprietor.

VALENTINE & SON'S PHOTOGRAPHS
OF England, Scotland, and Wales,
Norway, Spain, Morocco, West Indies, New Zealand. &c., COMPRISING OVER 40,000 VIEWS.

THE LARGEST, FINEST, AND MOST RECENT SERIES OF OXFORD
MAY BE INSPECTED AT THE CENTRAL ÷ PHOTOGRAPH ÷ DEPOT,
35, CORN-MARKET STREET.
ALDEN & CO. LTD., PROPRIETORS.

THE OXFORD VIEWS ARE IN THREE SIZES:
THE SIXPENNY SERIES 5s. 6d. per dozen.
“CABINET,” One Shilling each, or 10s. per dozen.
“IMPERIAL,” Two Shillings each, or 20s. per dozen.
THEY MAY ALSO BE HAD MOUNTED AND FRAMED IN VARIOUS WAYS, EITHER PLAIN OR COLOURED, AND AS LANTERN SLIDES.

ALFRED MOSLEY,
Watchmaker, Jeweller, Silversmith & Optician,

DEALER IN COINS AND ANTIQUES.

REPAIRS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

17, CORN-MARKET STREET, OXFORD.

Art Jewellery.

ALFRED MOSLEY'S
OXFORD SPECIALITÉS.

THE 'VARSITY

BOATING BROOCH,

Artistically designed, with the Arms of the University or of any of the Colleges heraldisically enamelled. Post free for 10/6.

THE OXFORD SPOON.

THIS Unique Souvenir of the historic City and University consists of a richly chased Spoon, in silver gilt, the handle being formed of a Bishop's Pastoral Staff enclosing a Shield bearing the Arms of the See of Oxford, surmounted by an Episcopal Mitre. On the bowl are engraved the Arms of the University and City.

MANUFACTURED AND SOLD ONLY BY

ALFRED MOSLEY,
17, CORN-MARKET STREET,
OXFORD.

Lock to Lock AND RIVER LIFE.

THE JOURNAL OF THE THAMES.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY, PRICE TWOPENCE.

LOCK TO LOCK AND RIVER LIFE, now under entirely new management, is the original River Paper, and the only recognised organ of the Boating Public. Some of its features are:—

OUTER VIEWS AND INTERVIEWS, THE HOMES OF RIVERLAND, RIVER STORIES, THAMES MYTHOLOGY,
OUR WATERWOMEN.
RIVER FASHIONS.

It also contains full and reliable record of River life and Sport for the current week, together with a number of miscellaneous articles contributed by experienced writers and correspondents.

LOCK TO LOCK has a large, influential, and rapidly increasing circulation, not only along the whole of the Thames, but in London, business parts of the country, and abroad. It is illustrated by well-known artists, and is now in its EIGHTH YEAR.

The Journal is on sale every Friday at all Railway Stations and Newsagents, or it will be sent by post on Friday afternoon for 2s. 8d. (three months); 5s. 4d. (six months); or 10s. (twelve months).

10, WINE OFFICE COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Alden's Oxford Guide.—Advertisements.

LAMBERT,
GOLDSMITHS AND SILVERSMITHS,
Coventry Street, Piccadilly, London, W.

SACRAMENTAL, PRESENTATION, PLATE, AND TROWELS.

Largest Collection of Antique Plate in the World.

Makers of the Chancellors' Challenge Cup,
THE OXFORD CROSSES AND ETON CUPS.

Oxford Albums.

ALDEN & CO. LTD.

Respectfully announce to Visitors that they have just issued AN ENTIRELY NEW

SHILLING ALBUM OF PHOTOGRAPHS,

Containing Sixteen Selected Oxford Views,

Permanently printed by the Collotype Process, and immeasurably superior to the foreign productions which are frequently offered.

Also another SET, containing Twelve beautiful Permanent Photographs, 4½-in. by 3-in., for NINEPENCE.

Or an assortment of Twelve unmounted Views in Envelope, 1s.

Larger and better Albums kept in stock, containing Twelve or more Photographs, 5s., 10s. 6d., 21s., 42s.

The “Bartolozzi Series” of Permanent Photographs, printed in Sepia tint, on rough toned paper, combining the artistic character of an original drawing with the accuracy of a photograph.

Ten Views, 8 in. by 6 in. on paper 12 by 10, 9d. each ; set of Ten in case, 5 . Framed complete in oak and gold, 2¹/₂. each.

ALDEN & CO. LTD., 35 CORN-MARKET STREET, OXFORD.

FRITH'S Photographs,

ABOUT 50,000 VIEWS.

Incomparably the largest and most complete collection extant.

The series contain views of places of interest throughout the United Kingdom and the Continent,—India, Egypt, The East, China, Japan, &c., &c., being also represented.

FRITH'S PHOTOGRAPHS

Are supplied unmounted, in various sizes, at popular prices.

They can also be obtained mounted in any style.

Special value in OPALINES, MEDALLIONS, and FRAMED GOODS of every description, including the Popular Plush Mounts, Easels, &c.

Retail of all Dealers in Photographs throughout the world; wholesale of F. FRITH & Co., Reigate, London, and Charfield. Sold in Oxford by ALDEN & Co. Ltd.

The Way About Series

OF

GAZETTEER GUIDES.

CLOTH, with MAP PRINTED on LINEN and IN POCKET,

2s. 6d.

PAPER COVERS and MAP,

1s.

About 250 pages Sixty Illustrations. Excellent Road Maps and a Comprehensive Gazetteer.

THE ONLY GUIDES

Which cater for the Cyclist, Photographer, Angler, Pedestrian, and General Tourist.

Full Lists of Hotels and Boarding Houses, Dark Rooms, Angling Streams and Quarters, Cycle Repairers, and Notes on Train Services, &c., &c.

The following Volumes are ready :—

Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Middlesex, Hertfordshire, Somersetshire, Herefordshire, South Wales, Oxfordshire, Devonshire, Derbyshire, and also (without Gazetteer) Warwickshire, and Norfolk and Suffolk.

In the Press :—

Northumberland and Durham, Essex, Ireland, English Lake District, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, &c.

ILIFFE & SON, 3, St. Bride Street, London, E.C.

Sold by ALDEN & Co. Ltd., 35, Corn-Market Street, Oxford.

Oxford Photographs.

THE Publishers of "Alden's Oxford Guide" respectfully invite the attention of Visitors to their unrivalled collection of PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEWS of the University, City, and neighbourhood, including a large number of new subjects, from negatives recently taken. They have also introduced an artistic series of Views of the Colleges, in permanent Bartolozzi tint, mounted suitably for framing, and a series in colours by a new and beautiful process.

ALDEN & CO. LTD.,
Bocardo Press, 35 Corn-Market Street,
Opposite St. Michael's Church (No. 66 on Plan).

MITRE HOTEL, OXFORD.

THIS OLD-ESTABLISHED and well-known House having been still further enlarged, adding to its Coffee and Drawing Room accommodation, fitted with Electric Light and an increased number of Bed and Bath Rooms, is now in a position to meet all the requirements of Visitors.

Early application should be made to (See page 109 of GUIDE.)

THE MANAGER.

MAGDALEN TOWER, OXFORD.

Patronised by H.R.H. the late Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, &c.

ALDEN'S
OXFORD GUIDE

WITH KEY-PLAN OF THE UNIVERSITY AND CITY, AND NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.

ORIGINALLY COMPILED AND ANNUALLY REVISED
By EDWARD C. ALDEN.

53RD THOUSAND.—ENTERED AT STATIONERS' HALL.

Oxford :

ALDEN & CO. LTD., 35, CORN-MARKET STREET.
LONDON : SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT AND CO. LTD.

1895.

PREFACE TO TWENTY-FIRST EDITION.

WITH last year's edition of this Handbook a sale of Fifty Thousand copies has been reached. The edition now offered to the public has been thoroughly revised, largely re-written, and brought well "up to date." For example, the Ashmolean Museum having been removed to its new rooms at the University Galleries, it will be found described under the heading 56 on pages 93-5. The work has been entirely reprinted, much fresh information is added, and several new illustrations are given.

For kind permission to reproduce the illustrations on the pages mentioned below, the publishers are indebted to the following :—Messrs. Cassell & Co., pages 7, 9, 13, 30, 63, 65 ; Messrs. Seeley & Co., pages 22, 33, 36, 47, 79, 97 ; Messrs. Nelson & Sons, pages 60, 102, 104 ; Messrs. Iliffe & Son, pages 81, 83, 103, 119 (top) ; the proprietors of the English Illustrated Magazine, pages 99, 101. The illustrations on pages 2, 69, 118, are from photographs by Messrs. Hills & Saunders ; that on page 71 by Messrs. F. Frith & Co.

The "enlarged" edition (price 1s., in cloth) contains a new Coloured Map of the University and City, corrected to the present date ; also an Appendix entitled "Old Oxford," contributed by a local antiquary, the late Major-Gen. GIBBES RIGAUD, Hon. M.A., Magdalen College ; and many additional illustrations, including a series of full-page "process" engravings.

The visitor will save himself time and trouble by a careful perusal of the short INTRODUCTION (next to the Alphabetical Index), before proceeding to the pages which follow.

Office of Alden's Oxford Guide,

35, Corn-Market Street, 1st Aug., 1895.

E. C. A.

* * Readers desiring information concerning the constitution and regulations of the Colleges or of the University, are referred to the Oxford Calendar, and other books in the list to be found in our advertising pages.

INDEX.

[The number in the first column gives the position of each place on the PLAN, and its order in the Guide; and that in the second column indicates the page containing the description.]

Colleges and Halls:		No.	Page.	Churches and Chapels:		No.	Page.
All Souls	-	19	40	CATHEDRAL, CH. CH.	-	29	62
Balliol	-	60	98	All Saints	-	65	108
Brasenose	-	22	48	Holy Cross, Holywell	-	146	19, 29
Christ Church	-	28-31	62	Holy Trinity	-	74	112
Corpus Christi	-	25	53	St. Aldate	-	32	71
Exeter	-	62	105	St. Barnabas	-	49	82
Hertford	-	11	21	St. Clement	-	-	31
Jesus	-	63	106	St. Ebbe	-	72	112
Kemble	-	10	18	St. Frideswide	-	-	111
Lincoln	-	64	107	St. George-the-Martyr	-	44	78
Magdalen	-	17	31	St. Giles	-	54	86
Merton	-	26, 27	55	St. John Baptist, Summertown	-	-	84
New Coll.	-	12	21	St. John-the-Evangelist	-	-	31
Oriel	-	24	51	St. Margaret	-	-	83
Pembroke	-	33	72	St. Martin (Carfax)	-	36	73
Queen's	-	14	26	St. Mary-the-Virgin	-	20	43
St. John's	-	55	86	St. Mary Magdalene	-	59	96
Trinity	-	61	103	SS. Mary and John	-	-	31
University	-	18	37	St. Matthew, Grandpont	-	-	71
Wadham	-	8	14	St. Michael-at-North Gate	-	66	110
Worcester	-	45	80	St. Paul	-	47	81
New Inn Hall (extinct)	-	38	75	St. Peter-in-the-East	-	13	25
St. Alban Hall (extinct)	-	27	59	St. Peter-le-Bailey	-	39	75
St. Edmund Hall	-	13a	26	SS. Philip and James	-	51	84
St. Mary Hall	-	23	50	St. Thomas-the-Martyr	-	71	111
Marcon's Hall	-	-	17	St. Aloysius (R.C.)	-	53b	85
Turrell's Hall	-	-	77	Baptist Chapel, New Rd.	-	37	74
Not incorporated:—				Commercial Rd.	-	73	112
Mansfield College	-	75	112	Brethren's Meeting Room	-	-	75
Manchester College	-	76	114	Congregational Church	-	43	77
Somerville College	-	53a	85	Friends' Meeting House	-	46	81
Lady Margaret Hall	-	52b	85	Methodist Free Church	-	41	76
St. Stephen's House	-	7b	14	Wesley Memorial Church	-	40	76
Wycliffe Hall	-	52a	85	Wesleyan Chapel, Walton-st.	-	-	83

N.B.—Complete lists of the Heads of Colleges and Halls, Terms, Professors, and chief officers of the University, and the Ministers of the City Churches and Chapels, will be found in Alden's Oxford Almanack, published annually, price 1d. [General Index overleaf.]

vi General Index. (For Colleges and Churches, see preceding page.)

	No.	Page.		No.	Page.
Addison's Walk, Magdalen	17	35	Kettel Hall - - -		105
Alfred's (King) Jewel -	2	93-4	Laud's Porch, St. Mary's	20	45
Arundel Marbles -	56	92	Liberal Hall - - -		77
Ashmolean, The Old -	2	6	Magdalen Coll. School -	15	29, 31
Ashmolean Museum -	56	93	Markets, The - - -		109
Bacon (Lord) Statue of -	9	16	Martyrs' Memorial - -	58	96
Bird's-Eye View from Sheldonian	3, 4		Medley & the Upper River		83
"Camera" -		48	Military College, Cowley		31
Bocardo, North Gate -		1, 110	Neighbourhood of Oxford		116
Bodleian Library -	6	10	Municipal Buildings, New	35	73
Botanic Garden -	16	29	Nuneham, By River to -		117
Broad Walk, Ch. Ch. -	28	59	Parks and "Mesopotamia"		19, 29
Camera Bodleiana -	21	46	Penitentiary - - -		29
Carfax (see also page 121)	X	73	Picture Gallery, Bodleian	6	12, 13
Castle, The -	69	111	"Pig Market," The		6
Cemeteries : Holywell -	14 ^b	19, 29	Pitt Rivers Museum -	9	17
Jericho and Osney -		83, 111	Police Stations - - -	70	109-111
Christ Church Meadow -	28	60	Port Meadow - - -		83
City Technical School -		112	Post Office - - -	34	73
Clarendon Building -	7	12	Probate Court - - -	67	111
Press -	48	82	Pusey Memorial House -		86
Laboratory -	9	17	Radcliffe Infirmary -	53	85
Institute -		80	Camera - - -	21	46
Convent of Holy Trinity -	52	84	Lib. (Museum) -	9	16
Convocation House -	4	8	Observatory -	50	83
Corn Exchange, The New		78	Railway Stations - -		110
County Hall and Prison	68-70	111	Randolph Hotel - -	57	95
Cranmer, Ridley, &c., pages	2, 8, 44, 96		Ruskin Drawing School -	56	92
Divinity School	No. 3	6	Salvation Army Barracks		74
Encenia, or Commemoration		5	Schools, The Old - -	5	8-9
Examination Schools, New	14a	27	Sheldonian Theatre -	1	3
Eye Hospital, The -		81	Bird's-eye view from		3, 4
Folly Bridge - - -	pages 71, 117		Shelley Relics and Memorial	10, 40
Fox's (Bp.) Pastoral Staff	25	54	St. Edward's School -		84
Frewen Hall - - -		75	Taylor Institution - -	56	90
Frideswide, Saint pages	62, 64, 75, 111		Theatre, The New - -	43 ^b	78
Guy Fawkes' Lantern	No. 56	94	Tramways - - -		viii
Gymnasium - - -		109	Union Society's Rooms -	42	76
Henry VIII.'s Sword -	56	93-4	University Galleries -	56	91
High School for Boys -	43a	77	Museum - - -	9	15
Girls -	52c	85	Observatory -	9	17
High Street - - -		37-8	Wesley, John & Charles pp.	70, 76, 108
Indian Institute - - -	7a	12	Wycliffe, John pages	27, 44, 53, 55, 100
Ilfley Church and Mill -		119-20	Wykeham's Staff & Jewel	12	24
Isis, The, and the Barges		61, 118	Y. M. Christian Association		78

* * The visitor is recommended to READ these two pages before proceeding.

[Route. — Use of Key-Plan. — Free Sights. — College Services, &c.]

ARMS OF THE CITY AND UNIVERSITY.

suggested at almost every step, it has been our endeavour to enable the visitor to gain, and to retain after even the shortest sojourn, a well-defined impression of this ancient and renowned University city.

 The Route adopted may be easily traced by following the numerical order on the KEY-PLAN, which is so placed inside the cover as to be available for constant reference ; corresponding numbers being attached to the description of places in the Guide. This system renders it exceedingly easy for the visitor to follow the prescribed route (which is recommended), while it also enables him readily to take any independent course he may please, according to the longer or shorter time at his disposal. Experience has proved that this simple arrangement is of much more real service than any complicated and confusing attempt to suggest a number of alternative routes.

 The use of the Key-plan will be much facilitated by remembering that, as in a map, the North is at the top and the South at the bottom. There ought not to be the slightest difficulty in determining one's whereabouts in a city like Oxford, with its numerous Churches and Collegiate Chapels all standing due East and West ; and if, bearing this in mind, the visitor will note our frequent references to the points of the compass (N. E. S. W.) he cannot possibly mistake his way. In the larger MAP, at the end of the shilling edition, the route is distinctly coloured.

[P.T.O.]

 Free Sights.—We desire to make it clear to visitors that, as a general rule, what is most worth seeing in Oxford is freely accessible to them. Not infrequently a group of strangers may be observed peeping with timid gaze through the gateway of some College, fearful lest in taking a step across the threshold they should be guilty of trespass, and little dreaming that the beauties beyond the portals are 'theirs to enjoy.' Let it be remembered, then, that the quadrangles and river-side walks of Magdalen (17) and Christ Church (28-31),* the Botanic Garden (16), the charming gardens of New College (12), St. John's (55), Worcester (45), Trinity (61), Wadham (8), Balliol (60), Exeter (62) (from 2 to 7), and the extensive walks in and beyond the Parks (page 19), are by the kindness of the authorities open free to visitors. Among other places of interest open free during the hours mentioned in the Guide, are Christ Church Cathedral (29), and the Chapels of Keble College (10), New College (12), Magdalen (17), All Souls (19), Merton (26), Trinity (61), and Exeter (62); the University Museum (9), and the new Indian Institute (7*a*): while at the Bodleian Library and Camera (6, 21), the Sheldonian Theatre (1), Divinity School and Convocation House (3, 4), Ashmolean Museum and University Galleries (56*ii*), New Schools (14*a*), Christ Church Hall, Library, Picture Gallery, and "Great Tom" (see pages 62-70), the Hall and Library of Keble College (10), &c., a very trifling fee only is demanded.† In the Colleges, no objection is offered to a quiet walk through the quadrangles; but should an inspection of the interior of Chapels (with the exceptions above mentioned), Halls, or Libraries be desired, application should be made to the gate porter, who will expect a small gratuity.

 The hours of Divine Service at the College Chapels accessible to strangers are given on pages 23 (New Coll.), 33 (Magdalen), and 66 (Ch. Ch.).

 If the visitor has but a very short time to spare, his best course will be to run through the first half of this book, seeing No. 1, 12, 17, 20, 21, without fail; and then if possible to get a look at No. 26, 28 to 31. Another important group—55 to 62 inclusive—lies within easy distance of the chief hotels. It is, however, extremely difficult to suggest any course suitable for a flying visit to such a city as Oxford, whose store of varied attractions demands and will repay the sustained attention of many days. The Table of Hours facing the Key-Plan will aid in economising time.

 Tram Cars now run at Penny Fares on the following routes, to and from "Carfax":—1. The Railway Stations, viâ Queen-street; 2. Cowley-road, viâ High-street; 3. Banbury-road, viâ St. Giles'-street; 4. Kingston-road, viâ Beaumont-street; 5. New Hinksey, viâ St. Aldate's-street. An omnibus service connects the N. of Oxford with Summertown (page 84).

* The figures within parentheses, wherever occurring in these pages, refer to the numbers on the Plan, and to their corresponding paragraphs in the Guide.

† See the Time-Table on the first page of this book, facing the Key-Plan.

Alden's Oxford Guide.

BOCARD, NORTH GATE.

THE visitor is recommended to take as his starting-point the central spot (marked O on the KEY-PLAN which will be found at the beginning of this book), where the main thoroughfare running north and south is crossed by the line of George-street and Broad-street from west to east. This point being midway between the Randolph and Clarendon Hotels, strangers staying at either of those well-known hostelries will find it the most convenient starting-place for the tour through the city in which we now propose to conduct them.

[This starting-point is most directly reached from the Railway Stations via Hythe Bridge-street and George-street. Should the visitor, however, make his entrance into the city by the Tramway route, via Park-End-street, New-road, and Queen-street (see Plan), he can alight at "Carfax," marked X in Plan. From Carfax a walk of two minutes down Corn-Market-street, due N., will bring him to the point above mentioned, which is quite easily recognisable as lying just beyond St. Michael's Church, whose plain square Saxon tower is the first prominent object which meets the eye looking northward from Carfax.]

Here we find ourselves at once on historic ground. A few yards southward, the North Gate of the city* formerly spanned the road, close to the ancient tower of St. Michael's Church, which still remains (see 66).* From the window of "Bocardo," as the prison over the gateway was called—Cranmer is said to have witnessed the martyrdom of Ridley and Latimer, which took place outside the N. wall, 16th Oct., 1555. We shall presently pass the scene of their sufferings, marked by a flat cross in the roadway opposite the S. front of Balliol College (60), as we walk down Broad street. The beautiful Memorial Cross erected in honour of the Martyrs will be visited in due course, or can be inspected at once if desired (see 58).

* See illustration. Further particulars are given in the chapter, "Old Oxford," appended to our Shilling Edition. Our publishing house—hence called "Bocardo Press,"—occupies the site of the bastion on the right of the view, opposite St. Michael's tower.

BROAD STREET.

The most comprehensive idea of the manifold attractions of Oxford is to be gained by a bird's-eye view from some central and lofty position, whence the visitor may survey the whole city at a glance, and make his choice of the objects to which he will give closer inspection at his leisure. This choice can readily be exercised ; for although for convenience' sake a certain route is prescribed in the following pages, yet by the arrangement of attaching to each place on the Key-Plan a consecutive number corresponding with the description, the visitor is enabled with perfect ease to take any independent course he may prefer. On the other hand, one who has but an hour to spend in Oxford cannot make a better use of that hour than by taking the comprehensive survey now suggested.

* The figures within parentheses throughout this work refer to the consecutive numbers prefixed to the paragraphs which describe the various places, and correspond with their respective positions on the KEY-PLAN.

Such a Bird's-Eye View may be obtained either from the Radcliffe Library (No. 21) or the Sheldonian Theatre (No. 1). The latter affords a post of observation which is high and dry, and easy of access in all weathers.

We begin our walk, therefore, by starting at once in an eastward direction down Broad-street (see Plan). Here we pass Balliol, Trinity, and Exeter Colleges, which we reserve for future inspection (see 60, 61, 62), our immediate object being to reach the

1. Sheldonian Theatre,* and mount the easy flight of stairs leading to the cupola on its roof. The view from this octagonal chamber presents a beautiful panorama which will surprise and delight the visitor who gains from it his first impression of this city of pinnacles and groves. We will briefly describe the scene from each of the eight windows, advising the visitor to trace the places by their numbers on the Plan and the Key which faces it.

From the window looking due south (on our right hand at top of staircase), we have an unbroken view of academic and ecclesiastical buildings, the most prominent of which are the grand dome of the Radcliffe Camera (21) and the church of St. Mary-the-Virgin (20) ; beyond these are the tower of Merton College (26), the elms of the Broad Walk, the tower and spire of Christ Church Cathedral (29), the Belfry Tower, Dining Hall (30), and "Tom" Tower (31), partly hidden by the steeple of All Saints' Church (65) ; while more in the foreground may be traced the roofs of the Bodleian Library (6), Brasenose (22), Lincoln (64), and Jesus (63) Colleges. From the next window to the right, beginning with the tower of All Saints' Church (65), we see the spire of St. Aldate's Church (32), the roof and lantern of the new Town Hall (35), the hall of Pembroke College (33), and further to the right the plain square tower of Carfax Church (36) ; while closer at hand are the Bodleian (6),

* The Sheldonian is approached from Broad-street through a small doorway between the fourth and fifth of the seventeen grotesque stone busts on pedestals ; and the building is entered by a door on the East side (to the left of our engraving on page 4). Open in summer from 10 till 6, in winter from 10 till 4 : see 3d.

the library, new buildings, hall, quadrangle, entrance tower, and chapel of Exeter College (62), the high-pitched roof and slender spirelet of the latter being most conspicuous objects. From the third (west) window we catch a glimpse (behind the chapel of Exeter College) of the tower battlements of St. Peter-le-Bailey Church (39), next to which are the roofs of the Union Society's Rooms (42), and the slender spire of the Wesley Memorial Church (40). Next come the plain old Saxon tower of St. Michael's (66), and the gables and lantern of the High School for Boys, with the new buildings of the Y.M.C.A. opposite. The trees in the distance cover the mound of the ancient Castle (69), and the Berkshire hills form a background to the whole. The fourth window gives us an excellent view of Broad street, looking west ; the nearest building on the left being the old Ashmolean (2), adjoining the north front of Exeter College (62) ; on the right are the handsome new buildings, chapel, and hall of Balliol (60), close to which are the chapel and gardens of Trinity College (61). Behind Balliol rise the roofs of the Randolph Hotel (57), and the Taylor Institute (56) ; further in the rear are the campanile of St. Barnabas Church (49) and the chimney-shaft of the University Press (48). To the right are the entrance towers, garden front, and garden of St. John's College (55), S. Aloysius' Roman Catholic Church, the Radcliffe

THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE.

Observatory (50) and Infirmary (53), and St. Giles's Church (54). From the fifth or north window, especially in summer and autumn, a scene of unrivalled beauty presents itself. Before us lie gardens and groves, rich with varying verdure,—the “pleasaunces” of St. John's, Trinity, and Wadham ; while beyond these are seen (left) the spire of SS. Philip and James' Church (51), and (right) the grand façade of the University Museum (9) ; between them the red brick of Keble College (10), with its lofty chapel, peeping here and there through the clustering trees. Nearer, on the right, we get a good view of Wadham College (8), its regular front and general plan being clearly defined. Its chapel is best seen from the sixth window ; from which also we notice the entrance to Holywell-street, marked by the domed turret of the Indian Institute (7a) ; beyond which are Manchester College (76) on the right and Mansfield (75) on the left, behind Wadham ; while at our feet is the roof of the old Clarendon Building (7). The seventh (east) window shows the Cherwell walk, leading out of the Parks, the Racquet Court, and the picturesquely situated Church of Holy Cross, Holywell (14b), backed by Headington hill. Nearer are New College lane, with Hertford College (11) on the right, and the fine tower and chapel of New College (12) embowered in the foliage of its gardens ; the grove of Magdalen (17) ; and beyond all, the heights of Shotover ; while the Clarendon (7) and the old Schools (5) form a foreground to the picture. From the eighth window we see the ancient church of St. Peter-in-the-East (13), the Schools Tower (5) facing us on the east side of the Schools Quadrangle ; between this and the twin towers of All Souls (19) is Magdalen Tower (17) in the distance ; and then the two low towers of University College (18), and the roofs of the New Examination Schools (14a). The houses beyond are situated on the Ifley-road in the S.E. suburb. The line of the High street can easily be traced, from Magdalen (17) on the left to Carfax Church (36) on the right.*

Before leaving this chamber, we venture to express a hope that the visitor will shun the example of hundreds of his predecessors, whose folly is immortalized by their inscriptions on its walls.

Descending, we pass through a large room originally occupied by the University Printing Press. The spacious floor is laid over the flat ceiling of the Theatre, which is sustained by enormous beams. Another descent brings us to the "Undergraduates' Gallery," from which we gain a good idea of the capacity of the building. At the annual Encœnia, or Commemoration, this gallery is crowded chiefly with junior members of the University ; the galleries beneath are filled with "dons" and ladies ; the area is densely packed with graduates and strangers provided with tickets ; while the Creweian oration in commemoration of Founders and Benefactors is delivered and prize compositions are recited from the "rostra," and honorary degrees are conferred by the Vice-Chancellor on distinguished guests.

* Should the visitor from any cause be unable to see the panorama from the Sheldonian described above, he will have another opportunity of a Bird's-Eye View from the gallery of the Radcliffe "Camera," which will be visited in due course (see No. 21).

The Theatre was built in 1664-9 by Sir Christopher Wren, at the cost of Abp. Sheldon, then Chancellor of the University, to provide a more suitable building for these exercises, which had formerly been conducted in St. Mary's Church (20), as well as to accommodate the University Press, which was set up under the galleries and in the roof. From this date till the removal of the press to the Clarendon Building (7), books printed by the University bore on their title-pages a vignette of the Sheldonian Theatre.

The design of the building was suggested by the ancient Theatre of Marcellus at Rome; and its arrangements are so ingenious that it will hold nearly 4,000 persons. The flat ceiling is in imitation of a canvas covering over gilt cords stretched from side to side. It was painted by Streater, serjeant-painter to Charles I., and allegorically represents an apotheosis of the Arts and Sciences, surrounding a central figure of Truth, from whose presence Envy, Rapine, and Ignorance are ignominiously hurled. On the walls are portraits of the founder (Archbp. Sheldon), the architect (Sir Christopher Wren), Baron Crewe, and the Duke of Ormond. A fine organ (by Willis: front designed by Mr. T. G. Jackson), erected in 1877 in the S. gallery, is frequently used in illustration of the public lectures of the Professor of Music which are delivered here: it may be heard also at occasional public "exercises" for the degree of Mus. Doc., performed in the Theatre under the bâton of their respective candidates, as well as at public performances of local musical societies. Close by (W.) is

2. The Old Ashmolean, built in 1682 for the reception of a collection of curiosities presented to the University by Sir Elias Ashmole. The natural history and anthropological objects were a few years since removed to the New Museum (9); and the remaining portion of the collection was in 1894 transferred to new and spacious rooms at the University Galleries (56), under which heading they will be found described. The space thus vacated has been appropriated to the rapidly growing needs of the Bodleian Library (6).

Behind the Sheldonian Theatre, and facing its S. front, is

3. The Divinity School (open 9 to 5, see 3d.) Begun in 1445 at the expense of the University, for academic exercises in Divinity, it was completed, with the Library above (6), by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, in 1480. Passing through the Proscholium,*

* Its popular name "the Pig-market" is said to be a survival of the base use to which it was degraded in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII.

THE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

we enter by a finely moulded Perpendicular doorway a noble room with arched stone roof, elaborately groined in every bay, and adorned with bosses rendered extremely interesting by their carved work, forming heraldic bearings and a vast variety of elegantly composed monograms. The windows on either side, once "richly dight" with glass of varied hues, were despoiled by the reformers of Edward VI.'s reign, when the whole building fell into decay.

Some exciting scenes were enacted here during the tragic reign of Mary. On the 30th September, 1555, Latimer and Ridley were cited to appear in the Divinity School before commissioners appointed by Cardinal Pole, to answer for "sundry erroneous opinions" openly maintained by them in Oxford. In 1625 the House of Commons met in the Divinity School, when driven from London by the ravages of the plague. Still later, during the Civil War, it was used as a storehouse and armoury. Towards the close of the 17th century the building was completely restored by Sir Christopher Wren, who also opened a door on the N. side for the accommodation of processions into the Theatre (see page 5). The rostra, or pulpits, shown in the engraving are now removed to the new Examination Schools (14a). A door at the W. end of the room gives access to

4. The Convocation House, built (with the rooms above, forming an addition to Duke Humphrey's Library) at the cost of the University, under the Chancellorship of Archbp. Laud, and opened Oct. 30, 1640. It is used for the transaction of business by the Convocation of the University.

The scene in this room on "Degree days," at the ceremony of conferring degrees upon students, is one of great interest. Adjoining is the Apodyterium, or robing-room, used also as the Chancellor's Court-room: it contains fine portraits of Lords Eldon and Stowell. Returning through the Divinity School, we find ourselves in

5. The Schools Quadrangle, built 1439, rebuilt 1613-18.

Although the rooms on the ground floor still retain over their doorways the names of the "faculties," they have long ceased to be used for teaching purposes; but the public examination of students was carried on here until 1882, when the opening of the New Examination Schools (14a) enabled the University to devote these rooms to the much needed enlargement of the Bodleian (6).

Immediately facing us on our entrance to this court is a picturesque bit of Renaissance, the Schools Tower, late Gothic in general design, but ornamented with columns of the five orders of Roman architecture, grouped in pairs, Tuscan, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite,—and a sculptured figure of James I.

THE SCHOOLS TOWER OF FIVE ORDERS.

The architect of the tower was Thomas Holt, who died in 1624. It has recently undergone thorough and faithful restoration at the cost of over £6,000.

6. The Bodleian Library (Bibliotheca Bodleiana) is approached by a small doorway in the S.W. corner of this quad. The principal rooms are reached by a quaint staircase of shallow steps.

Open daily (with exceptions), 9 till 5, April to July; after July till 4 or earlier dusk; fee 3d. Readers may obtain free access on satisfactory recommendation.

The most ancient portion of this library, over the Divinity School (3), was founded by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, son of Henry IV., and built 1445-80. In 1550 the King's Commissioners despoiled it of books, and in 1556 the University dis-furnished it. In and after 1598 Sir Thomas Bodley re-fitted and restored it, and in 1610-12 added the E. wing (the portion first entered by the visitor). Some thirty years later another wing was added W., the Convocation House (4) forming its lower floor.

“Directly we enter, we are struck by the stillness and solemnity that reign around, helped by the dim light, the windows with painted glass, the ponderous shelves, the illuminated missals, the graduates or attendants conversing in low whispers or moving quietly about. For reading purposes the library is as free and as good as the library of the British Museum; with the advantages that you may be seated in front of a window commanding a beautiful garden prospect, that your armchair is not disturbed, that books are allowed to accumulate around you, and that you are not obliged to return them to the care of the custodian on leaving the library. The visitor will not fail to notice the portraits in the upper library, and especially to cast a grateful look at the fine portrait of Bodley. He will see the exercise-books used by Edward VI. and Elizabeth when children, and, close by, the autographs of distinguished visitors.” Among the countless objects of interest here displayed in glass cases will be seen the Shelley Collection, presented in 1893, consisting of autograph poems, portraits, and other relics.

The Bodleian contains over half-a-million bound volumes, including 30,000 volumes of manuscripts and other rich literary treasures. (The number of works with separate title-pages is above $1\frac{1}{4}$ millions.) Moreover, by a grant from the Stationers' Company, dated 1610, now merged in a Copyright Act, it enjoys the right to a copy of every work published in this country; and additions are also constantly being made to it by purchase and presentation. Number of items acquired by the Library in the year 1894:—By gift or exchange, 9,198; under Copyright Act, 44,583; new purchases, 6,429; second-hand, 577; total, 60,787.

DUKE HUMPHREY'S LIBRARY, BODLEIAN.

Before descending the staircase, we ascend a few steps to the right, and enter

The Picture Gallery (see illustration on next page), which usually remains open for an hour after the Library is closed.

It contains a fine series of portraits of University benefactors; besides many curiosities: among them a chair made out of Drake's ship, with an inscription by the poet Cowley, some admirable models of ancient temples, &c. The writing-desk of the great Lord Clarendon is one of the latest additions. From the windows of the Picture Gallery we get a striking view of the Camera (21).

Descending to the quadrangle, we find at the next door on our right (formerly the Natural Philosophy School) the Hope Collection of Engraved Portraits, removed from the gallery of the Radcliffe, together with the Sutherland Collection, from the Bodleian. The portraits number upwards of 210,000, and many of them are of extreme interest and rarity. Open free from 11 till 1 and 2 to 4 (Sat., 11 to 1 only).

Leaving the Schools Quadrangle by a passage-way on its N. side, and crossing an open space, we pass into Broad-street through

7. The Clarendon Building, completed in 1713, partly from the profits of Lord Clarendon's "History of the Rebellion," the copyright of which was presented to the University by his son.

To this building the Printing Press of the University was removed from its original quarters in the Sheldonian (1), and here it remained until 1830, when the present Printing Office (48) was erected. Its apartments are now used for various official purposes connected with the University.

Descending a flight of steps, and crossing Broad-street, the visitor will notice the imposing front of the Clarendon, and the fine effect of the whole cluster of buildings he has just left. If we take a few paces southward, towards the E. front of the Schools, we shall get an anticipatory glimpse of another beautiful architectural group, to be visited by-and-by (see Nos. 20 and 21). The new building, facing Broad-street at its E. end, is the 7a. Indian Institute, designed by Mr. Basil Champneys in the style of the English Renaissance, with some oriental details.

The portion at first completed (occupying less than half the entire site) was opened by the Vice-Chancellor on the 14th Oct., 1894. On a brass tablet in the entrance lobby is a Sanskrit inscription, deeply incised, of which the following is a translation : " This building, dedicated to Eastern Sciences, was founded for the use of Aryas (Indian and Englishmen) by excellent and benevolent men desirous of encouraging knowledge. The high-minded Heir-Apparent, named Albert Edward, son of the Empress of India, himself performed the act of inauguration. The ceremony of laying the memorial stone took place on Wednesday, the 18th lunar day of the dark half of the month of Vaisakha, in the Samvat year 1939 (—Wednesday, May 2, 1883). By the favour of God may the learning and literature of India be ever held in honour : and may the mutual friendship of India and England constantly increase." The institution owes its origin mainly to the advocacy and exertions of the Professor of Sanskrit (Sir M. Monier-Williams, K.C.I.E.), who thus describes its objects : " The work of fostering and facilitating Indian studies in this University ; the work of making Englishmen, and even Indians themselves, appreciate better than they have done before the languages, literature, and industries of India ; the work of qualifying young Englishmen for Indian careers, and of qualifying young Indians, who come to us for training and instruction, to serve their own country in the most effective manner." Among the means by which these objects are sought to be attained, are : a Museum, illustrating the industries, products, natural history, and religious and social life of India : a Library of Oriental books, MSS., &c. ; Lecture-rooms, Reading-rooms, &c. The buildings were finished by the completion of the west front, opened on June 2nd, 1894.

THE PICTURE GALLERY, BODLEIAN LIBRARY.

The Library is open in Term from 10 a.m. till 1 p.m. and from 5 to 6 p.m. ; in Vacation from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Museum is open from 10 till 6 during Summer Term, and till 4 at other times. Visitors are admitted on application to the officer in charge, and writing their names and addresses in the Porter's book. The Institute is entirely closed from Aug. 16th to Sept. 14th.

Proceeding up Park-street, we pass on the left St. Stephen's House (7b), founded in 1876 for training candidates for Holy Orders, especially for the work of Foreign Missions ; and on the right is the principal front of ARMS OF WADHAM.

8. Wadham College, founded by Nicholas Wadham and Dorothy his wife, on the site of an old priory of Augustinian Friars : the first stone was laid on 31st July, 1610.

Its buildings exhibit a singular mixture of architecture of coeval date ; the Gothic portions on the garden side being of unusual merit for the time. Through the stone-vaulted gateway we enter a spacious quadrangle ; on the E. side of which (facing us) is the Chapel with ante-chapel, a fine well-proportioned structure : the glass in its east window is by Bernard Van Ling, 1620. The new organ gallery and organ case are from designs by Mr. Jackson ; and there has recently been added an old Communion Table of carved oak (temp. Eliz.) from Ilminster Church, Somerset, where Nicholas and Dorothy Wadham once worshipped. The Dining Hall adjoining has a handsome screen and lofty timber roof, and contains a number of portraits; over the entrance are sculptured figures of the founders and King James I. Corresponding with the Chapel, and communicating with the Hall by a cloister, is the Library. The other sides of the quadrangle comprise lodgings for the warden, fellows, and undergraduates.

The Garden is entered through a passage at the left-hand corner: though small comparatively, it possesses many beauties, and affords a picturesque view of the Chapel, Library, &c. Amongst the eminent members of this college were Admiral Blake, Sir Christopher Wren, Seth Ward, Harris, author of the "Hermes," Dr. Kennicott, and others.

Leaving Wadham College, and pursuing our course northward by a pleasantly shaded path, with the gardens of Wadham on the right and those of Trinity (61) and St. John's (55) on the left, we suddenly come upon the stately pile known as

9. The University Museum, from the designs of Messrs. Deane and Woodward, opened in 1860.* This Museum is much more than a mere collection of curiosities; it is in fact about the most comprehensive and complete institution in the world for the teaching and study of the Natural Sciences. Its objects are thus briefly summarized by Sir Henry Acland†:

"First, to give the learner a general view of the planet on which he lives, of its constituent parts, and of the relations which it occupies as a world among worlds; and, secondly, to enable him to study, in the most complete scientific manner, any detailed portion which his powers qualify him to grasp. . . . The departments to which are assigned, for mutual aid and easy interchange of reference and comparison, a common habitation under one roof, are Astronomy, Geometry, Experimental Physics with their Mathematics, Chemistry, Mineralogy, Geology, Zoology, Anatomy, Physiology, Medicine. For the illustration of Nature the student requires four things: first, a work-room, where he may practically see and work for himself: secondly, a lecture-room, where he may see and be taught that which by himself he can neither see nor learn; and, as an adjunct to these, a room for more private study for each; thirdly, general space for the common display of illustrative specimens, so placed as to be convenient for reference and comparison between all the different branches: and lastly, a library, in which whatever has been done, or is now doing, in the science of this and other periods and countries, may be conveniently ascertained."

* Open free to strangers daily from 2 till 4; members of the University and students introduced by a Professor from 10 till 2. Residents in Oxford must be accompanied by a member of the University, or bear an order from a member of Convocation.

† "The Oxford Museum." By H. W. Acland, M.D., and John Ruskin, M.A. (Reprinted, 1893.)

These varied requirements are here supplied. The principal collections are arranged in a spacious quadrangle covered by a glass roof, supported on cast iron columns, with wrought iron ornaments, representing, in the large spandrels between the arches, interwoven branches of lime, chestnut, sycamore, walnut, palm, and other trees; and in the capitals of the columns and the trefoils of the girders, leaves of elm, briar, waterlily, passion flower, ivy, holly, &c. An open arcade of two storeys, surrounding the central court, furnishes ready means of communication between the several departments and their collections in the area.

STATUE OF LORD BACON.

On the ground floor this arcade comprises 33 piers and 30 shafts; and in the upper corridor there are 33 piers and 95 shafts. Thus the court is surrounded by 125 shafts and 191 capitals and bases. The shafts were carefully selected, under the direction of the late eminent professor of Geology (J. Phillips, F.R.S.), as examples of the most important rocks of the British Islands; and the capitals are beautifully carved representations of natural objects. Thus, to quote the late Professor, "this is not a haphazard collection of pretty stones crowned by pretty flowers, but a selection of marbles and sculptures intended to illustrate points of some interest and important in science and art." On massive corbels, projecting from the fronts of the piers on the ground floor, are placed statues of men eminent in the several branches of natural science. Her Majesty the Queen presented statues of the first of the modern school,—Francis, Lord Bacon, and four other eminent of science, the last of which (John Hunter) was unveiled by the Princess Christian. May 30th, 1886. Next to this is the statue of Dr. Thomas Sydenham, once a Fellow of All Souls, which was given by the Warden and two of the Fellows, and unveiled by Lord Salisbury August 9th, 1894. Round the arcade are arranged the various rooms required for each department of study. On the upper floor is a Theatre or Lecture Room seating 600 persons; also a room devoted to cabinets of the choicest butterflies, moths, &c., known as the Hopeian Entomological collection; and extending 200 feet along the W. front is the valuable Radcliffe Library of Natural Science, open daily from 10 till 4, and later on certain evenings during Term. All persons are admitted to read, on satisfactory recommendation.

Removed from the principal pile, yet easily accessible from the lecture-rooms and court, are dissecting-rooms, workshops, furnace-rooms, and laboratories.

The Chemical Laboratory (enlarged in 1878) forms a strikingly picturesque object at the S.W. angle; and

The Clarendon Laboratory, erected in 1872 for the study of experimental physics, adjoins the main front at its N. end.

It was built at the cost of the Clarendon trustees, out of a fund arising from the publication of certain MSS. of Earl Clarendon, formerly Lord Chancellor.

The Pitt Rivers Collection is contained in an annexe to the main building eastward, which was opened in 1887.

This collection consists of musical instruments, implements of war, models of boats, pottery and other ornamental art, intended by its donor, General Pitt Rivers, D.C.L., F.R.S. (formerly Col. Lane Fox), to illustrate the gradual development of invention, and forming a most interesting Anthropological Museum. The collection has undergone re-arrangement under the care of Professor Moseley, F.R.S.; and many additions have been made to it from the Ashmolean (2) and other sources. It is open free to visitors daily from 2 till 4 p.m.

Other additions to this temple of modern science are the Physiological Laboratory, erected in 1885 for the use of the Waynflete Professor, at a cost of some £10,000, from designs by Messrs. Deane and Son, of Dublin; and a considerable extension opened in 1893 for the department of Human Anatomy, containing Dissecting Room, Museum, Lecture Theatre, Microscopical Room, &c. (Mr. H. W. Moore, Architect). Further E., in the grounds, is the Astronomical Observatory, built by the University in 1874, for the use of the Savilian Professor.

It is fitted up with all the best apparatus for the study of Physical Astronomy, including the celebrated reflecting tele-scope and other valuable instruments presented by the late Dr. Warren De la Rue, F.R.S.

Facing the Museum is Marcon's Hall, formerly Charsley's Hall, the first private Hall founded under the statute of 1858. At the opposite corner, N., is the residence of the Warden of Keble, which forms part of the E. front of 10. Keble College, opened by the Marquis of Salisbury, Chancellor of the University, June 23, 1870.

It was founded by subscription in memory of the author of the "Christian Year,"—the late Rev. John Keble, sometime Fellow and Tutor of Oriel College (see 24), for perpetuating academical education definitely based upon the principles of the Church of England, and with the intention of combining sober living and high culture with Christian training. Its appearance strikes one as very unlike that of the other colleges: but when the glare of colour is toned down by age, it will not fear comparison with its older companions, which it worthily rivals both in area and number of students.

The superb and lofty Chapel, built from designs by Mr. Butterfield, at the cost of the late Mr. W. Gibbs (over £60,000), was solemnly dedicated on St. Mark's Day, 25th April, 1876.*

The interior decorations are designed to illustrate, in some sort after the manner of the Christian Year, the successive dealings of God with His Church, Patriarchal, Jewish, and Christian. They bring out by means of type and anti-type the relationship of the Old to the New Testament, and show the process of God's gradual revelation of Himself in Christ. The history of Noah, Abraham, Joseph, and Moses, in twelve of the panels of the W. half of the chapel, with the figures of the twelve minor prophets in the four windows above, and of the four greater prophets with David, Solomon, Samuel, and Elijah in the W. windows, refer to the earlier dispensations. A series of events from the New Testament,—the Annunciation, the Nativity, Baptism, Crucifixion, and Resurrection of Our Lord,—is represented in mosaics, placed in the E. half of the chapel. The Ascension of Our Lord is represented in the glass of the E. window. The series is continued to the present time by a mosaic panel beneath the E. window, which represents Our Lord as He revealed Himself, after His ascension, to St. John in the Isle of Patmos, "One like unto the Son of Man," present in His Church now and till the end; the Church being symbolised by seven candlesticks around Him, and her chief ministers by seven stars in His right hand. It conveys to the eye the promise given of His perpetual presence. Christian Saints in mosaic panels on either side support this figure of Our Lord, while the Greek and Latin Doctors are represented in the four side windows above. In the trans-pt windows are central figures of St. Peter and St. Paul, supported by figures of the four Evangelists. At the West end is depicted in three mosaic panels the Second Coming of Our Lord to Judgment, enthroned with the apostles, and attended by angels bearing the cross, the crown of thorns, the spear, and the nails. Lower down, in the centre, St. Michael the archangel

* The Chapel is entered through a small cloister at its W. end, and is open free daily from 10 to 12 and from 2 to 6.30; in the winter months is closed at 4 p.m.

KEBLE COLLEGE CHAPEL

divides the saved on the Right Hand from the lost on the Left Hand of Our Lord. At the foot are the words, "Hereafter ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven."

The South transept, beneath the organ chamber, has been fitted up as a memorial chapel to the late Canon Liddon.

The range of buildings opposite to the Chapel comprises the Library and Dining Hall, opened on St. Mark's Day, 1878, the first stone having been laid on St. Mark's Day, 1876.

The grand staircase is lighted by a handsome oriel window, and surmounted by a lofty arched roof. The Hall and Library are open to visitors from 2 till 4 p.m. throughout the year; in Long Vacation they are also open from 10 till 12. Tickets (6d. each) may be obtained of the porter. In the Library is Holman Hunt's celebrated picture, "The Light of the World" (valued at £10,000), presented to the college by the late Mrs. Thomas Combe, who was also the donor of a bust of Cardinal Newman. by Woolner. The Hall contains a fine portrait of Keble, also of the first Warden (Rev. Dr. Talbot, now Vicar of Leeds and Hon. Canon of Ripon), &c.

GATEWAY OF KEBLE COLLEGE.

On leaving Keble College, visitors will notice the spacious and pleasantly laid-out grounds of the University Parks, extending N. and E. of the Museum (9). This vicinity has been known as "The Parks" from the time of the Civil War, when the parks of artillery were planted here. University Cricket and Football Matches are played in the Parks, and a commodious Pavilion has been erected there for the accommodation of spectators. Should time permit, a stroll through the Cherwell Walk called "Mesopotamia" will reward the stranger with views of the towers and spires of Oxford in various picturesque groupings; and Mansfield and Manchester Colleges (75,76) may be reached by a road turning S. out of South Park-road. Holywell Church and Cemetery (14^b) can also be visited by a short cut shown on our Plan.

ENTRANCE GATEWAY, NEW COLLEGE.

Retracing our steps past Wadham (8), and crossing Broad-street at its E. end by the new Indian Institute (7a), we notice at the corner of New College street

11. Hertford College, founded as Hart Hall (Aula Cervina) by Elias de Hertford in 1284. It was created a college by royal charter in 1740, but enjoyed only a brief career; and in 1820, when old Magdalen Hall* was destroyed by fire, the society was removed to this building, which then took the name of Magdalen Hall. In 1874 the original title "Hertford College" was restored by Act of Parliament, and the college re-incorporated.

In recent years considerable improvements have been carried out. The two very plain wings of the W. front, built in 1822 in the so-called classic taste then in vogue, have been connected by a handsome Entrance Gateway, with new Hall and other apartments, from designs by Mr. T. G. Jackson, which impart to this elevation a boldness and variety of outline to which it was before a stranger. Some remains still exist of the original Hart Hall, of which many eminent men were members, as Tyndale the early translator of the New Testament, good Sir Matthew Hale, and Charles James Fox. The lane hard by leads to

12. New College,† founded June 30, 1379, by William of Wykeham, Bp. of Winchester, and built on a plot of ground in the N.E. angle of the city, the fortified wall being its boundary and defence. It was opened with solemn religious ceremonial, April 14th, 1386; and after the lapse of 500 years most of the buildings remain to this day as they were designed by the munificent founder.‡

The narrow unpretending entrance may be a little disappointing. "Our forefathers built in a different spirit from ourselves. They contrived a lowly portal, reserving their best attractions for the interior; and well did they know how to charm the soul which they had first caused to enter by that gate of humility. Let not, however, the exquisite statues of the Angel Gabriel, the Virgin, and the founder himself, which surmount the gateway, pass unnoticed." Once inside the "lowly portal," every shade of disappointment vanishes.

On the left hand stands in solid majesty the glorious Chapel,—

* Formerly adjoining Magdalen College, to which it was attached by the founder, Bishop W. Wykeham, in 1487. See illustration on page 34.

† Originally designated "St. Mary's College of Winchester in Oxenford."

‡ It should be noted that the upper storey of the great quadrangle was added in 1675.

NEW COLLEGE CLOISTERS, BELL TOWER, AND CHAPEL (W. END).

NEW COLLEGE FROM THE GARDENS.

SAMPSON LOW & CO. LTD.

1906/07

its massive buttresses, deep-mullioned windows, and lofty pinnacles combining to impress the mind with a sense of grandeur. Adjoining the Chapel at its E. end is the lofty Dining Hall, completing the N. side of the first quadrangle. In the distance, beyond the second court, we get a glimpse of the lovely Gardens, open to the public daily. These will be seen in due time (see page 24); but now, turning to the left at the N.W. corner, the visitor enters the fine old Cloisters, and (again to quote the late Dean Burgon)

“ . . . dull of heart must he be if their religious silence and solemn beauty do not affect him. Many an interesting inscription awaits him here, on the pavement and on the walls. Then let the Chapel be visited, and the harmonious proportions of the ante chapel from the entrance at the S.W. corner be duly recognised. He will be struck by the venerable remains of painted glass coeval with the founder, and with the ancient brasses that strew the floor.”

The Chapel is open free from 11 till 1 and from 2 till 4 (2 till 3 on Saturdays). Full choral service is performed here daily: 8 a.m. (7.30 in Summer term) and 5 p.m.; Sundays, 9.30 a.m. and 6 p.m., open to the public, except on Sundays in term, when an order from the Sub-Warden is required.

The great W. Window was painted in 1777 by Jervais from designs by Sir Joshua Reynolds: the chief picture representing the Nativity, and the lower range of figures the Christian and cardinal Virtues: Faith, Hope, and Charity; Temperance, Fortitude, Justice, and Prudence. Passing into the Choir, we notice the fine windows containing in the upper small lights the original stained glass. Of the larger lights, those on the S. side are believed to have been designed by scholars of Rubens, and were repaired in 1740: those on the N. side, containing figures of Old Testament saints, were painted in 1765-74 in a much inferior style. Extensive restorations and alterations of this Chapel were effected in 1872-80 by the late Sir G. G. Scott. The plaster ceiling was replaced by a very handsome oak roof resting on the original corbels, greatly enhancing the lofty effect of the interior. The old oak-work has been cleaned from the paint with which its delicate carving had become encrusted; while the panelling and cornice above the stalls are new, replacing the deal and plaster of last century. The organ-loft is almost entirely new. The beautiful Sedilia have been reconstructed, and the canopy work of the Reredos restored in stone from the design of one of the original canopies. This restoration was completed in 1894, the niches being filled with a series of statues illustrative of the Te Deum, under the superintendence of Mr. Pearson, R.A., the sculptor being Mr. Hitch, of London. The E. end has thus resumed the stately grandeur of its early days, before the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by whose command the original statues were removed. The smaller but beautiful sculptures immediately above the Communion Table are the work of Westmacott.

FOUNDER'S CROSIER. CHESTNUTS BLOSSOM
NEW COLLEGE.

In a glazed recess on the N. side of the chapel is preserved the Founder's Pastoral Staff, exceedingly elegant in form, of silver gilt, exquisitely wrought, and curiously enamelled with jewels, one of the most gorgeous relics of the kind in existence.

The Dining Hall, East of the Chapel, is reached by a flight of steps in the Muniment Tower. It was well restored and a fine oak roof added in 1866, by the late Sir G. G. Scott.

In the Hall are portraits of the founder, Bps. Waynflete, Ken, Lowth, &c., one of the most recent being an excellent portrait of the present Warden (Rev. Dr. Sewell) painted by Professor Herkomer; and arms of founders and benefactors adorn the windows and wainscoting (c. 1550).

Descending the stairs, and turning to the left under the Library through another vaulted archway, we cross the Garden Court (1684) and enter the Gardens, which are seen to best advantage in early summer, when the

FOUNDER'S JEWEL,
NEW COLLEGE.

IN NEW COLLEGE GARDENS

FROM ASPECTS OF MODERN OXFORD

in all their beauty, and the foliage of the central "mount" shows its many-shaded green; or in the autumn, when luxuriant creepers clothe the walls with crimson.

The Gardens are bounded on the N. and E. by the only perfect remnant of the Old City Wall.^{*} Its bastions and parapets, and the walks along its battlements remain as they were in the Civil Wars, an interesting relic of the olden time. On the opposite side is seen the venerable church of St. Peter-in-the-East (13). We leave the gardens by a path at the N.W. corner, between the college and the City Wall, and pass through its hoary portal into a New Quadrangle, with terrace-walk. Here we obtain a fine view of the massive Belfry Tower, as well as of the old fortifications on which the N. transept of the chapel has been grafted. Facing these ancient bulwarks is a handsome range of New Buildings, erected 1872-6, from designs by Sir G. G. Scott; and further eastward are still more recent additions (1886-7), designed in excellent taste by Mr. Basil Champneys.

In the Warden's Library are preserved many interesting and valuable relics of the Founder: perhaps the most beautiful of them is the Jewel represented on page 24, which was used as a clasp or brooch for fastening his episcopal vestments. This jewel is in the form of the initial M. crowned, of silver gilt, set with rubies, emeralds, and pearls; the two figures represent the Annunciation.

Before quitting the precincts of this superb foundation, we may mention among the eminent names connected with it, Archbishop Chichele, founder of All Souls (19), Bishop Waynflete, founder of Magdalen (17), the saintly Bishop Ken, Dr. James, the first librarian of the Bodleian (6), and Sidney Smith.

Passing through a deeply recessed and richly moulded arch in the City Wall, we find ourselves again in the original Quadrangle. Leaving this by the gate at which we entered, we turn to our left under a grim old archway of the 17th century (see page 20), and, noticing on the right a picturesque cluster of academic buildings (All Souls, 19), follow the zigzag course of the lane till we reach

13. St. Peter's-in-the-East Church, one of the most ancient and interesting churches in the city. The fine Norman Crypt appears to be of earlier date than the chancel over it (c. 1150). The beautiful reredos of alabaster and mosaic is by Mr. T. G. Jackson, 1888. The nave retains on the S. side and at the W. end its original Norman wall up to a certain height; but great alterations were made at a later date, commencing on the N. side in the latter half of the 13th century. The S. doorway is a rich specimen of Norman work, obscured by the porch with an upper storey, characteristic of the 15th cent.* Adjoining the churchyard is 13a. St. Edmund Hall, founded in 1226 by Edmund Rich, afterwards Archbp. of Canterbury, and known as St. Edmund; refounded in 1559. The existing buildings are not older than the 17th century, and present no features of special interest. By a small doorway opposite, we enter

^{*} See the notes on "Old Oxford," appended to the Shilling edition, which also contains two full-page views of the Gardens.

14. Queen's College, so named in honour of Edward III.'s Queen Philippa, and founded in 1340 by Robert de Eglesfield, her chaplain, "to the honour of God, the profit and furtherance of the Church, and the salvation of souls," and for the special benefit of natives of Cumberland and Westmoreland.

The present buildings were erected at the close of the 17th century; and the High street front, with its unique and elegant cupola surmounting a statue of Queen Caroline, consort of George II., was completed after Hawksmoor's designs in 1756. The W. wing, which suffered severely by a disastrous fire in 1886, has since been thoroughly restored.

In the Chapel, a massive structure in the classic style (1714), are preserved some curious stained windows from the old chapel, by Van Ling (1635). The ceiling, representing the Ascension, was painted by Thornhill, and the altar-piece is a copy of Correggio's "Night." The screen, marble columns, Provost's seat, and great Organ, are especially worthy of notice.

The Library, in the second quadrangle, is one of the most extensive in the University. It is a large and handsome building, containing more than 60,000 volumes, and some original portraits; among them Henry V. as Prince of Wales, and his uncle Cardinal Beaufort. The garden front is adorned with eight statues.

* By an order in Council, 1891, the benefice of St. John Baptist (26) is now united with that of St. Peter-in-the-East.

The Hall, nearly adjoining, is a fine lofty room, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, containing many good portraits of royal and other benefactors. It was decorated in 1892 by Mr. C. E. Kemp.

The members of this college have from time immemorial been daily summoned to dine in hall by the sound of trumpet, instead of by the chiming of a bell as elsewhere. Here, too, is observed on every Christmas Day the ancient ceremony of ushering in the Boar's Head with the singing of a carol. This was a common custom in the North of England, with which Queen's has always been connected; but tradition says that it commemorates the deliverance of a student of the college, who, while walking in the country studying Aristotle, was attacked by a wild boar from Shotover Forest; upon which he crammed the philosopher down the throat of the brute, and thus escaped the threatened peril. There is another curious ceremonial observance at Queen's College: on New Year's Day the Bursar presents to each member or guest a needle and thread, with the words, "Take this and be thrifty." The custom is supposed to be derived from a somewhat fanciful rebus on the name of the founder, Eglesfield (aiguille et fil). In the Buttery is preserved a drinking-horn presented by Queen Philippa, with other curiosities worth inspection. The early English Reformer, John Wycliffe (see 60), was one of the first members of this college: and from his time to the present many eminent men have studied here, including princes, poets, antiquaries, and divines: among the former, Edward the Black Prince and Henry V.

Leaving Queen's College by its principal entrance, we turn to the left and walk down the High-street towards Magdalen (17). Nearly opposite us, on the site of the Angel Hotel, famous in old coaching days, are the extensive 14a. New Examination Schools for the University. Opened 1882: cost about £100,000. Open to visitors from 9 till 4, fee 3d. The picturesque combination of the Tudor style with that of the Renaissance affords an excellent example of Mr. Jackson's work. Our illustration shows the North wing, facing the High street. It comprises a grand Entrance Hall, from which there are approaches to the spacious Examination Rooms occupying the upper floor of three sides of a quadrangle.

These magnificent apartments were first utilised for the purposes of public assembly rooms on the first of May, 1883, when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales attended a concert and conversazione in aid of the Royal College of Music. More recently they have been used for the lectures and pleasant social gatherings of the University Extension students at the well-known Summer Meetings held in August. The mosaic paving of the entrance hall, the choice marble columns of the vestibules, and the gorgeous Grand Staircase, as well as the decorative carving throughout, will repay careful examination. Over the entrance portico are two panels carved in relief, representing the examination of an undergraduate, and the ceremony of conferring a degree.

THE NEW EXAMINATION SCHOOLS, N. FRONT.

The East front, as seen from the corner of King street, is very effective. The picturesque gabled house at the east end of the principal front was added in 1888 to provide rooms for the Delegacy of Non-Collegiate students.

Close by stood formerly the East Gate of the City ; and just opposite is Long-Wali-street, lounded on one side by an embattled wall enclosing the fine elms of Magdalen Grove (see page 32).

[Should the visitor have time to pursue this direction a short distance, he will be gratified by an inspection of the Church and Cemetery of Holy Cross, Holywell (146). The foundation of the Church is of remote antiquity, but the chancel arch (c. 1150) is the only remaining evidence of its date. The church was restored and redecorated in 1893. Adjoining, N., is the Oxford Penitentiary, occupying part of the old manor-house, with additional buildings. Thence a newly laid-out road leads to Mansfield and Manchester Colleges (75, 76). and to the Park and Walks described on page 19.]

At the corner of High street and Long Wall is 15. Magdalen College School, founded 1480, as a Grammar School in connection with the college and University. The present room was built from designs by the late Mr. Buckler, 1851.

A new Master's House, with accommodation for boarders, has been erected (1894) at the S.W. end of Magdalen bridge, see page 31.

Crossing the road a little farther on, and descending some steps, we enter the 16. Botanic Garden (open free till 6 p.m. or dusk), by a handsome Gateway designed by Inigo Jones in the rusticated Italian style, and bearing statues of Charles I. and II.

The Garden, founded by the Earl of Danby in 1632, "with a view especially to the faculty of medicine," is the oldest institution of its kind in the country. It occupies five acres of ground, appropriated in 1231 for use as a Jews' Burying Ground,* in lieu of a neighbouring piece formerly used by them, but granted by a charter of King Henry III. as a site for the Hospital of St. John, afterwards Magdalen College (17). The grounds contain a large number of plants systematically arranged. The collection of rare exotics is now housed in a fine range of new Conservatories, erected 1893-4, including houses for succulents, palms, and water-lilies (the latter of European fame), a fernery, and a house devoted to the culture of orchids.

The Library is unique of its kind, and possesses many rare works of botanical interest. The Library, Herbarium, and Museum may be visited from 10 till 4, by permission of the Professor of Botany. John Tradescant (see 2 and 56) is said to have been the first gardener here.

The pleasant walk on the bank of the Cherwell leads to a gate conducting into Merton Fields and Christ Church Meadow. As we propose visiting these hereafter (see nos. 28-32), we now return to the High-street entrance: noticing on our way the fine proportions of Magdalen Tower, which directly faces us.

* In mediæval times Oxford had a large number of Jewish residents, but they were expelled at the end of 13th century.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE AND BRIDGE, FROM THE CHERWELL.

It will be well worth while to get a good general view of the exterior of Magdalen College before proceeding to a closer inspection : and this we shall best do by walking a few paces to the right, on to Magdalen Bridge, which here spans two branches of the Cherwell, a tributary of the Thames, and was in former days the entrance to Oxford by coach from London. (See frontispiece).

This Bridge, built in 1779, was widened in 1882-3 from the designs of W. H. White, M. Inst. C.E., Engineer to the Oxford Corporation. The width of the old bridge was 26 ft. 6 in. inside the parapets, with a carriage-way of 18 ft. The width of the added portion is 20 ft., making the present width 46 ft. 6 in. inside the parapets, with a carriage-way of 32 ft. As the new S.W. elevation is an exact copy of the original masonry the beauty of the bridge is retained, while the general effect is much enhanced by its improved proportions. Pausing about half-way across, let us turn to admire the unequalled prospect. "Magdalen College," said Lord Macaulay, "is one of the most remarkable of our academical institutions. Its graceful tower catches, afar off, the eye of the traveller who comes by road from London. As he approaches, he finds that this tower rises from an embattled pile, low and irregular, yet singularly venerable, which, embowered in verdure, overhangs the sluggish waters of the Cherwell." Here, too, we get some lovely glimpses of river scenery and wooded landscape : on one side the Botanic Garden (16), whose rich and varied foliage forms a charming setting to the towers and spires beyond ; on the other side the Water Walks of Magdalen (p. 32) ; while across a level and verdant meadow is seen the parish church of St. Clement, built in 1827, in place of the old church which formerly stood at the S.E. end of the bridge, where the grave-yard still remains. On the high ground behind the church is Headington Hill Hall, the seat of G. H. Morrell, Esq.* The delightfully situated house at the S.W. end of the Bridge was erected in 1893-5 from designs by Sir A. Blomfield & Sons, to accommodate the Head Master and fifty boarders of Magdalen College School (15).

Leaving the Bridge, we now retrace our steps towards 17. St. Mary Magdalen College, founded in 1458 by William Patten, of Waynflete, Lincolnshire, and built 1475-81.

* In the populous suburb beyond the bridge are also situate the new Church and Cemetery of SS. Mary and John, the Mission House of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, with its new Conventual Church now approaching completion ; St. Ignatius (R.C.), and several Nonconformist Chapels ; an Almshouse, the House of Charity of the Sisters of Nazareth (R.C.), the Constitutional Hall and the East Oxford Liberal Club, the Hospital for Incurables, the Union Workhouse, and grounds for Cricket, Lawn Tennis, and Athletic Sports. On the heights of Bullingdon, about two miles by the middle (Cowley) road, are the Barracks, &c., of the Military Dépôt, and the Royal Military College, Cowley. On Rose Hill is one of the three new Cemeteries.

In 1448 the founder gathered together a body of students in the High street, probably where the New Schools (14a) now stand. Ten years afterwards, having obtained from King Henry VI. possession of the ancient Hospital of St. John, he removed his society to the present spot. The majestic Tower (1492-1507) has been erroneously attributed to Wolsey, who was junior bursar at the time; it is 150 feet high, and contains a musical 'ring' of ten bells. The window tracery and other carved work has been carefully restored (1891), and a new stone figure of St. Mary, by Mr. C. Dressler, placed in the middle pinnacle on the Eastern side. (See frontispiece, reproduced from a recent photograph.)

OPEN-AIR PULPIT.

The college buildings now form four quadrangles, covering an area of about twelve acres; its grounds occupy nearly one hundred acres, comprising lawns and gardens, the shaded Water Walks beloved by Addison, and the Grove, "dainty relic of monastic days," where, within a stone's throw of the High street of the city, deer are quietly browsing under huge old elms with their cawing rooks, as though the haunts of men were distant and forgotten.

As we approach the college, we shall admire the good taste displayed in the additions completed 1882-4 by Messrs. Bodley and Garner, forming the Quadrangle of St. Swithun, in admirable harmony with the older buildings.

We enter Magdalen through the new porter's lodge, adjoining the new Entrance Gate, and find ourselves in the old Quadrangle of St. John Baptist, with its curious canopied Pulpit of stone.

From this pulpit a sermon was formerly delivered annually on St. John Baptist's Day to a congregation assembled in the quadrangle, the ground being strewn with rushes and grass, and the buildings dressed with green boughs, in commemoration of the preaching of the Baptist in the Wilderness. The custom fell into disuse about 1750, but it survives in a "University sermon" preached in the college Chapel annually on 24th June.

The W. doorway of the Chapel is of extremely beautiful design, quite without precedent. Over it, in niches, are figures of St. John Baptist, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Swithun, Edward IV., and the founder. Next is the Univernment Tower, in which the archives are preserved. Further to the left is the Great Gate of the College, usually called the Founder's Tower, adorned with statues of St. Mary Magdalen, St. John, Henry III., and the founder. It contains on its first floor a magnificent state banqueting-room, lighted at each end by a grand oriel window. This apartment was restored and richly decorated in the mediæval style, and two state bedrooms furnished throughout in accordance with the date of the building, under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott. There are preserved here some fine old Tapestry hangings, which were presented to the college by Prince Arthur, son of Henry VII. Adjoining are the President's lodgings, rebuilt in 1888-9, from designs by Messrs. Bodley and Garner, and between this and the new St. Swithun's tower stands the picturesque remnant of old Magdalen Hall shown on p. 34 (see 11).

The Chapel (open free daily, from 11 to 12.30) is entered under the Muniment Tower by a door to the right.

It was completed in 1480, on the usual T-shaped ground-plan, forming an ante-chapel and choir, separated from each other by the organ screen. The public are admitted to the daily Service free on week-days at 10 a.m. and to the ante-chapel only at 6 p.m. On Sundays and on other occasions it is necessary to procure an order for admission to the chapel. There is a large and well-trained choir; the founder having made special provision that even in the event of a diminution of the society's revenues the staff of chaplains and choristers should always be kept up to its full strength. On the N. side of the altar a small chapel has been restored to receive the tomb of Richard Patton, father of the founder, William of Waynflete. The canopied niches of the Archedos were filled with statues in 1864-5. The altar-piece, "Christ bearing His Cross," is ascribed to Ribalta, a Spaniard. Over this is a relief by Sir F. Chantrey, representing

W. DOOR OF CHAPEL, MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

Christ appearing to St. Mary Magdalen. The choir windows are now filled with stained glass by Hardman, the gift of the late Lord Selborne, formerly a Fellow of the college; and the designs in chiar-oscuro, removed to the choir in 1740, are now restored to their original positions in the ante chapel. In the great W. window, originally consisting of seven lights, is a large chiar-oscuro, after Christopher Schwartz, representing the Last Judgment.

Leaving the Chapel and keeping to the right, we follow the course of the Cloisters till we reach the staircase to the Dining Hall.

REMAINS OF OLD MAGDALEN HALL.

SEE PAGE 33

The Hall is adorned by some handsome oak panelling, with several curiously carved figures at the W. end (dated 1541), representing scenes in the life of St. Mary Magdalen. On the wall are a choice painting of the Magdalene, and, among others, portraits of the Founder, Bp. Fox, founder of Corpus Christi (25), Prince Henry, Prince Rupert, Bp. Hough, Bp. Philpotts, Lord Selborne, and the late venerable president, Dr. Routh, by Pickersgill.

The Kitchen, near the foot of the Hall staircase, is a spacious detached building, with lofty wooden roof. It is of great antiquity, and probably was the original kitchen of the Hospital of St. John Baptist.

Passing along the Cloisters, the visitor will be impressed with the splendour of the architectural group formed by the Chapel and Hall, backed by the matchless Bell-Tower ; and, at right angles therewith, the Gateway Tower before noticed, unrivalled in the beauty of its design, and marvellously picturesque in its garment of clinging foliage (see page 36). No cloister now remaining in England can compare with this. The quaint allegorical statues on the buttresses (date cir. 1509) will repay examination.

The Library occupies the west side of the great quadrangle, over the cloisters. It contains a large collection of books and valuable illuminated MSS.—a copy of St. Chrysostom's works in Greek of the 11th century, also some rare examples of early printing, including Caxton's "Boethius," and a "Comment. in Arist. de Anima," printed at Oxford in 1481 by Theodoric Rood of Cologne.

Leaving the Cloisters by a passage on the N. side, we have before us—across a fine lawn, edged with flower-beds—the New Buildings, 1733 ; on our left we see a portion of the Grove or deer-park ; and on the right are the Water Walks, open free to the public.

Old Antony à Wood quaintly extols these "pleasant meanders shadowed with trees. At some times of the year," says he, "you will find them as delectable as the banks of the Eurotas, where Apollo himself was wont to walk and sing his lays." Entering these delightful walks by a stone bridge over the Cherwell, we turn to the left, and follow the pathway until we reach another bridge on the left leading to the deer-park, from which is to be seen an old water-mill, now modernized into a dwelling house. Here the path turns sharply to the right, and a few more steps will bring us into the delightful avenue still known as Addison's Walk, said to have been a favourite resort of that eminent man of letters when at Magdalen. If time does not permit the visitor to complete the circuit of the meadow, he can now retrace his steps to the Cloisters.

A few interesting articles of gold and silver plate have here survived the requisitions made by Charles I. during the Civil War. Among these is the Founder's cup, and a grace-cup presented on the restoration of the Fellows who had been ejected in the time of James II. when a Roman Catholic President was forced on the college. The incident is illustrated in one of the frescoes in the Houses of Parliament. Bishop Hough, whose portrait is in the Hall, was the President who resisted the King's arbitrary demand. A remarkable ceremony annually observed at Magdalen College, forms the subject of a recent well-known painting by Mr. Holman Hunt. Every May-day morning, at five o'clock, a Latin Hymn to the Holy Trinity is sung on the summit of the Tower by the choir habited in their surplices. The custom is commonly said to have been substituted for a mass anciently performed for the soul of King Henry VII., but is probably, like other May-day usages, a relic of Pagan times. The hymn now sung is taken from the College grace, and is in no way connected with the annual commemoration of Henry VII. in the chapel on the same day. The words of the hymn, with the music by Ben Rogers (College organist in 1685), together with the late Dean Burgon's beautiful poem descriptive of the ceremony, are published as an illustrated booklet (6d.) at the office of this Guide.

CLOISTERS, CHAPEL, LIBRARY, AND FOUNDER'S TOWER, MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

HIGH STREET, OXFORD.

Before leaving, the visitor should not fail to pass beneath the stone pulpit into the Chaplains' Quaarangle, and obtain a closer view of the fine Tower. The buildings on the right were erected in 1507 out of the remains of the old Hospital of St. John. On the left, below the Dining Hall, are the Common Room and the Bursary, where are preserved an ancient carved coffer and some quaint specimens of firearms, a relic of the good old times when the bursar made perilous journeys on horseback to collect the college rents.

After thus exploring the beauties and antiquities of Magdalen College, the visitor will be inclined to agree with a modern writer who declares that it is "perhaps on the whole the most beautiful, certainly the most enjoyable, place, not in Oxford only, but in England."

Returning up the High Street, on the same side of the way, we cannot fail to be impressed at every step by the ever-changing scene, as the street in its graceful curve reveals successive beauties, until at Queen's College (14) the supreme point of view is gained.

"The visitor here beholds the finest sweep of street architecture which Europe can exhibit. Antwerp may have quainter pieces, Edinburgh more striking blendings of art with nature, Paris and London may show grander coups d'œil, and there is architecture more picturesque in Nuremburg and Frankfort. But for stately beauty, that same broad curve of colleges, enhanced by many a spire and dome, and relieved by a background of rich foliage, is absolutely without parallel. Queen's (14) on the right, of fair but very modern appearance, leads the eye along to the charming front of All Souls (19), beyond which are just visible the spiral columns of St. Mary's (20); and opposite those two colleges ranges a long castellated façade, its dark-grey contours broken by oriel windows, and the bright emerald of its turfed quadrangles shining out of two massive gateways." (Daily Telegraph, June, 1872) That ancient edifice is

18. University College. No other college has so venerable a look; albeit, to tell the truth, the appearance is due rather to the soft oolitic stone of which the college was built than to the actual antiquity of its existing portions. University College, as it now stands, was erected between 1634 and 1675, in that stormy period when King Charles I. was holding his broken Parliament in the city, and the University was melting down its plate to coin money for his losing cause. But as a college its origin is far more ancient; and tradition ascribes to King Alfred the first establishment of a University Hall upon this spot.

Although the tradition has been sanctioned by a legal decision, and by the celebration in 1872 of the so-called millenary of the foundation, yet it is

(18)

(65) (22)

HIGH STREET.

(19 & 20)

quite without historical basis. The facts of the case are thus stated by the late Prof. E. A. Freeman:—"The history of Oxford begins in the tenth century; in the eleventh it was a place of the first importance as a military post, and as the scene of great national gatherings. But it is not till the twelfth that we get the first hints of the coming University, the first glimpses of schools, scholars, and lecturers; and it is not till the thirteenth that we get anything like colleges in the modern sense. In that age too comes, not indeed University College, but the benefaction out of which University College grew." The first mention of a royal foundation in the college documents occurs in a petition written in Norman-French, and addressed to King Richard II. by "your poor petitioners the Master and Scholars of your College called 'Universite Hall, in Oxenford,' which Col'lege was first founded by your noble progenitor, King Alfred (whom God absolve), for the maintenance of twenty-four 'Divinis Perpetuels.'" The first historical endowment of the college dates from 1249. In that year William, Archdeacon of Durham, bequeathed 310 marks to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University, for the endowment of masterships. Several ancient Schools or Halls were in course of time acquired (see 22), and early in the fourteenth century the society found a local habitation on the present site, its title then being "Great" or "Mickle University Hall." In the next century the title "The Universite Colledge" became frequent. The college has been rebuilt and enlarged during subsequent ages, the present buildings dating from 1634-75, and forming a typical example of 17th century architecture.

The first (E.) gateway leads into a small quadrangle, under a tower bearing on the N. side a statue of Mary, Queen-consort of William III., and on the S. side one of Dr. Radcliffe (see 21), who erected this portion of the edifice at his own expense, and bequeathed £600 per annum for travelling fellowships. The second gateway tower bears statues of Queen Anne and James II.,* and leads to the Great Quadrangle, on the S. side of which is the Chapel, renovated and altered in 1862 by Sir G. G. Scott, but retaining the old cedar wainscoting and oak screen. The side windows are by Van Ling, 1641. On the W. wall is a fine sculpture by Flaxman in memory of Sir Wm. Jones. The Hall adjoining (refitted 1766, repaired 1892) contains good portraits of Lords Eldon and Stowell, Dean Stanley, and other eminent members of the college. The Library occupies the S. side of the new quad., entered from behind the Hall. It was built in 1860-1, in the Decorated style (Sir G. G. Scott, architect) to supersede the old library, which was situated over the kitchen. Statues of Lords Eldon and Stowell, formerly Fellows of the college, occupy a conspicuous position at the W. end of the interior. In the Common Room are curious portraits of Henry IV. and Dudley, Earl of Leicester, burnt in wood by Mr. Griffith; also busts of King Alfred and William Pitt. In the grounds to the rear, a house for the Master was built a few years ago; and in 1889 a new tutorial residence adjoining the library. A dome-roofed building, entered by a small cloister from the N.W. corner of the W. quad., was erected in 1892-3 from designs by Mr. Basil Champneys, for the reception of Mr. Onslow Ford's memorial statue of the poet Shelley, the gift of Lady Shelley to the college, of which the poet was once a member. The mausoleum connects the older portion of the front with a W. wing added in 1843 (Sir C. Barry, architect).

* This is said to be the only statue of James II. in England, except the one at Whitehall.

On the opposite side of the High-street we are faced by 19. All Souls College, founded in 1437 by Henry Chichele, of Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire, one of the original Fellows of New College (12), afterwards Abp. of Canterbury, whose statue, with that of Henry VI., adorns the tower beneath which we enter.

It is styled in the charter, "The College of all the Souls of the faithful departed, and especially the souls of Henry V., King of England and France, and of the faithful subjects of the realm who died in the French Wars;" and was founded for one warden, forty fellows, two chaplains, three clerks, and three choristers. There are now four Bible-clerks, who are the only undergraduates at All Souls; the fellowships being filled up by election from other colleges. By the founder's statutes preference in election of members was given to those candidates who should prove themselves to be of his kin; but this restriction has been abolished; and by the new statute of May, 1882, provision is made for fifty fellowships, of which several are tenable only in connection with University professorships, or other offices. Chichele spent, besides the cost of the site, a sum of £4,545 15s. 5d. in the buildings of the First Quadrangle and the original refectory. It is worthy of notice that this quadrangle retains its pristine features, its relative proportions never having been altered, as at New College (12) and Brasenose (22), by the addition of a third storey.

On the N. side stands the Chapel, a good specimen of late Perpendicular work, 70 ft. by 30 ft., entered by a vaulted porch at the N.W. angle of the quad. It is open free to visitors daily in Term, from 12 to 1 and 2 till 4. Four of the windows of the ante-chapel contain the original stained glass; the great W. window was filled by Hardman in 1862; those in the choir have been quite recently added. But the chief glory of the chapel is its singularly beautiful Reredos. This superb adornment of the E. end was walled up in 1664, and with the fine wooden roof was for two centuries concealed by lath and plaster; until, a restoration of the chapel being taken in hand about twenty years ago, the reredos was brought to light, seriously dilapidated, it is true, and despoiled of its statues, but still affording sufficient data for the present magnificent work, which was completed in 1876 at the expense of the late senior Fellow of the College, Earl Bathurst, under the superintendence of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott.

ALL SOULS COLL. & ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

It comprises 36 statues under elaborately carved canopies, and nearly 100 statuettes (all executed by Mr. E. Geffowski), surrounding and surmounting the principal subject, the Crucifixion. Beneath are three richly decorated panels in bas relief (by Mr. C. E. Kemp, 1889), representing the Deposition, the Entombment, and the Descent into Hades.

Many of the larger statues are portraits of contemporary Fellows, some of which are easily recognisable. We give below a list of the larger figures, in order, beginning on the left-hand side of the bottom row :—

Lower Tier :—Earl Bathurst (the restorer), Catharine of France, Henry V., Margaret of Anjou, Abp. Chichele (founder).—THE CRUCIFIXION.—Henry VI. (co-founder), Abp. Warham, John of Gaunt, Bp. Goldwell, Cardinal Beaufort.

Second Tier :—Edward Duke of York, John Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, Michael de la Pole Earl of Suffolk, John Duke of Bedford.—St. Jerome, St. Gregory, St. John Baptist, St. Ambrose, St. Augustine.—Thomas Duke of Clarence, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, An Archer (temp. Hen. V.), Thomas Montacute Earl of Salisbury.

Third Tier :—The Twelve Apostles, with St. Michael in the centre.

Fourth Tier :—OUR LORD in Glory, with two attendant angels ; on His Right Hand, souls saved ; on His Left Hand, souls lost.

Above are inscribed the words "Surgite mortui, venite ad judicium" (Arise, ye dead, and come to Judgment !), and beneath, over the altar-table, "Beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur" (Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord).

The floor is paved with Purbeck and Devonshire marbles, exquisitely inlaid at the E. end. The Hall, E. of the Chapel, contains many good portraits ; among them the founder, Henry VI., Sir W. Blackstone, Abp. Harcourt, Bp. Heber, Lord Salisbury, &c. A small archway (facing us as we leave the Chapel) leads to the Second Quadrangle, which, in spite of some incongruities of style, affords one of the grandest architectural scenes in Oxford. Let us take our stand at the foot of Hawksmoor's twin towers, a few steps to the right, and enjoy the view. Opposite is a picturesque cloister or piazza, with entrance gateway, date 1734 ; behind which rise majestically the dome of the Radcliffe (21) and the beautiful spire of St. Mary's Church (20). On the left extends the range of Hall and Chapel, and facing this on our right, occupying the whole N. side is the Codrington Library, 200 ft. in length, built 1716-60, which, though of debased design, not unfitly completes the picture.

This library was founded by Col. Codrington, a former Fellow, who bequeathed books of the value of £6,000 and a sum of £10,000. It contains more than 70,000 volumes, many of them legal works ; also a statue of its founder, a series of busts of eminent Fellows, and a singular Planetarium, kept in motion by machinery. The Library and a comfortable modern Reading-room are open for study to persons properly recommended. Among the celebrated men who have been Fellows of All Souls, may be mentioned Linacre, Sir Anthony Shirley, Abp. Sheldon (see 1), Jeremy Taylor, Bp. Tanner, Sir William Blackstone (whose monument is in the library), Sir Christopher Wren, Bp. Heber, the poet Young, and Lord Salisbury. Mr. Gladstone is an Honorary Fellow.

SECOND QUADRANGLE, ALL SOULS COLLEGE.

Leaving All Souls, the next building on our right is the beautiful 20. Church of St. Mary-the-Virgin. The Tower is a very stately structure of the 13th century, with massive buttresses at the angles; later in the same century the characteristics of the Early Decorated style had so far developed, that the splendid pyramidal group of turrets, pinnacles, and windows, crowned by the spire, was grafted on to a base probably prepared for a less ornate surmounting. The ball-flower or pomegranate ornament was profusely employed in honour of Eleanor of Castile, mother of Edward II., in whose reign the spire was probably completed.

The spire was restored in 1861 by the late Mr. J. C. Buckler; but the discovery having been made that the pinnacles and the twelve statues at its base (which are fine examples of early 14th cent. sculpture) were in a dangerous condition, a thorough reconstruction has been undertaken by Mr. T. G. Jackson, A.R.A.

The chapel of Edward II.'s almoner, Adam de Brom, founder of Oriel College (24), on the W. side of the tower, was considerably altered in the 15th century, when the remainder of the edifice was rebuilt. His tomb, despoiled of its brasses, remains.

St. Mary's is the University Church, and besides its parish services, the University sermons are preached here every Sunday during term-time, all graduates of the University in holy orders taking their turn. When the preacher is a man of note the large galleries are crowded with undergraduates, while the body of the church is filled to overflowing with the "dons" of the University and a general congregation. Men of the most diverse "schools of thought" have occupied the pulpit, and the well-known Bampton Lectures are regularly delivered here by divines appointed annually.

The historical and biographical associations of St. Mary's are of great interest, and strikingly illustrate the important part taken by Oxford in the ecclesiastical and religious life of the nation. Here John Wycliffe, "the morning star of the Reformation" (see 60), denounced the errors and abuses of his day. To the chancel of this church Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer were cited on 14th April, 1554, for a disputation with the doctors of Oxford and Cambridge, on the "presence, substance, and sacrifice of the Sacrament;" and here, on Sept. 7th in the following year, the same prelates were brought up for trial before a commission appointed by Cardinal Pole. Hither also, on 21st March, 1556, the venerable Archbishop Cranmer was brought for the purpose of publicly recanting his Protestant opinions.

The account given by Foxe of this scene is full of painful interest. Cranmer had been brought to St. Mary's from Bocardo prison (see page 1). The procession of the mayor and aldermen, followed by Cranmer between two friars, is described minutely. "Entering into the church, the psalm-singing friars brought Cranmer to his standing, and there left him. There was a stage set over against the pulpit, of a mean height from the ground, where Cranmer had his standing, waiting until Cole made him ready to his sermon." Attired in a bare and ragged gown, with an old square cap, he turned to a pillar near adjoining thereto, lifted up his hands, and prayed. Afterwards being permitted to speak, he concluded an affecting address in these words: "Forasmuch as my hand offended in writing contrary to my heart, my hand therefore shall be first punished; for if I may come to the fire, it shall be the first burnt. As for the Pope, I utterly refuse his false doctrines; and as for the Sacrament, I believe as I have taught in my book against the Bi-hop of Winchester, which my book teacheth so true a doctrine of the Sacrament, that it shall stand at the last day before the judgment seat of God, when the Papistical doctrine contrary thereto shall be ashamed to show her face." Having thus "flung down the burden of his shame," Cranmer recovered his strength, and went without fear to the stake. (See Martyrs' Memorial, No. 58.)

An inscription on a marble slab in the floor of the chancel informs us, on the authority of a contemporary record, that "in a vault of brick, at the upper end of the quire of this church," lies

Amy Robsart, the ill-fated heroine of Sir Walter Scott's Kenilworth. Her body was conveyed to Oxford from Cumnor Hall, some three or four miles distant, and was buried on Sunday, 22nd Sept., 1560, having lain in state at Gloucester Hall, now Worcester College (45).

The picturesque Italian porch with spiral columns was erected in 1637 by Dr. Morgan Owen, chaplain to Abp. Laud. Over it is a statue of the Virgin with the Child in her arms. This effigy occasioned such offence to the Puritans of that day, that it formed the subject of one of the articles of impeachment against the Archbishop. The Porch was admirably restored in 1865 by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, and now makes a charming picture, especially in the early autumn, when the whole S. side of the church is gorgeously festooned with Virginia creepers all aglow with crimson.

The old Chapel adjoining the N. side of the Chancel, for centuries the Congregation House of the University, was restored in 1871. The chamber over it was originally the receptacle of the University library, until the room over the Divinity School was built by Duke Humphrey (see 6).

THE PORCH, ST. MARY-THE-VIRGIN'S CHURCH.

In 1891 the great West window of this church was filled with stained glass from designs by Mr. C. E. Kemp, in memory of the late John W. Burgon, Dean of Chichester, and formerly the much beloved Vicar of St. Mary's.

At the W. end of the Church an ancient and historic ale-house has recently undergone, at the skilful hands of Messrs. Wilkinson and Moore, architects, a most successful transformation into a dwelling-house, appropriately named St. Mary's Entry, which harmonizes well with Mr. Jackson's new buildings of Brasenose adjoining. Passing this on our left (see illustration, which represents an official procession of the Vice-Chancellor with his Bedels) we find ourselves in Radcliffe Square, a "place" occupied entirely by academic edifices, and singularly rich in grand and beautiful effects. On the E. side the buildings of All Souls (19) group themselves in picturesque combinations. On the W. extends the E. façade of Brasenose College (22); on the N. is the Bodleian Library (6); on the S. is the University Church (20) we have just left. The effect of its fine tower and spire seen from this square by moonlight, or lit up by the evening sun against a clear sky, is indescribably impressive. The imposing structure in the centre, still popularly known as

21. The Radcliffe Library, is more correctly designated Camera Bodleiana (colloquially "The Camera"), being now used as a Reading-Room in connection with the Bodleian Library (6). It is open to visitors on payment of 3*d.* each, from 10 till 10 daily, with the exception of certain days and hours during which the Bodleian is customarily closed. It was built in 1737-49, from a design by Gibbs, at an expense of £40,000, contributed by Dr. Radcliffe, Physician to William III. and Mary and to Queen Anne. To this large sum he added an endowment of £250 per annum for a librarian's salary, and two other sums of £100 for repairs and the purchase of books. The library was originally called the Physic Library, its design being the encouragement of the study of the physical sciences ; but in 1861 the Radcliffe collection of books was removed to the spacious room provided for its reception in the University Museum (9), and the present building transformed into a reading-room to the Bodleian Library (6). Here all new publications are classified for the use of University men and any others who obtain permission to read ; and books can also be procured from "Bodley's" for perusal here, until 10 p.m.

THE "CAMERA," FROM ST. MARY'S ENTRY.

Should the day be fine, we would strongly advise visitors to ascend to the gallery which surrounds the base of the dome, whence they will enjoy a magnificent panorama of the University and surrounding country. A similar view from the cupola of the Sheldonian Theatre has already been described (see pp. 3, 4) ; but as the points of sight are not precisely identical, we subjoin a list of the principal objects seen from this gallery, giving in order the numbers they bear in the Guide and on the Plan.* The first conspicuous object N. (to our left at the top of the staircase) are the Schools Tower (5) and Bodleian (6) ; further eastward (to the right) are Nos. 8, 11, and 12, the two new colleges (75 and 76) lying further N.E. ; due E. we are bounded by 19, beyond which are seen 13, 14, and 17. Next are the lantern and roofs of 14*a* ; and then (S.) 18, 26, 20, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32. The old and new buildings of Brasenose (22) lie immediately beneath us on the W., while further distant are 65, 35, 36, 64, 69, 39, 42, 40, 43*a* and 66. N.W., behind Bishop Heber's tree (see p. 50), is 62 ; then come 6, 1 : and beyond these (N.) 60, 57, 55, 50, 53*b*, 54, 51, 10, and 9 ; the cupola and vane of 7*a* just showing above the roofs between 9 and 5.

On the W. side of Radcliffe Square is the old entrance to 22. Brasenose College, founded in 1509 by William Smyth,

ARMS OF BRASENOSE.

Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir Richard Sutton, Kt., of Prestbury in Cheshire. Several scholarships and exhibitions have been added by subsequent benefactors. Henry VIII's charter, entitling this college "The King's Hall and College of Brasenose," is dated 15th Jan., 1512, but the work of education has been conducted on this spot from a more remote period. The older buildings occupy the site of four ancient Halls ; one of which was called "Little University Hall," in contradistinction to "Mickle University Hall" (see 18); another, called Brasenose Hall (13th cent.) is said to have derived the name from its occupying the site of a brasen-hus or brewhouse. Over the old entrance-gate is the representation of a brazen nose, probably added at a much later date, when punning rebuses of this kind were in fashion.

* For a handy Key to these numbers, see Numerical Index on page facing the Plan.

The Gateway Tower is one of the most handsome in Oxford. It had been mischievously altered in the 17th century, but was faithfully restored some years since by the late Mr. J. C. Buckler.

Our view, from within the first Quadrangle, gives a much better idea of the original proportions of the buildings than the East front, where the relative height of the tower is diminished by a third storey, constructed in the reign of James I.

The Hall, which retains its primitive form, is entered on the South side of the quad. by a curious shallow porch, over which are 16th cent. busts of Alfred the Great and Johannes Erigena, a Scot, who is said to have lectured in Little University Hall on this site, A.D. 882. It contains portraits of the founder, also of Dr. Burton, author of the "Anatomy of Melancholy," and others. The Library forms the more modern portion of the front facing Radcliffe Square, and, with the Chapel which adjoins it, both attributed to Sir Christopher Wren, affords an interesting example of his attempt to combine the characteristics of mediæval and classical architecture.

BRASENOSE COLLEGE & RADCLIFFE CAMERA.

The Chapel, 1668, has a fine fan-tracery roof, and its general effect is good, notwithstanding its architectural anomalies. The glass of the E. window is by Hardman, 1855; and there are memorial windows to the Rev. F. W. Robertson, of Brighton, the Rev. J. P. Harris, chaplain of Lucknow during the memorable siege, Dr. Cradock, a former Principal, Mr. T. C. Edwards-Moss, and others. The new organ is by Hill & Son, 1892.

Among the eminent members of Brasenose should also be mentioned Bishop Miles, John Foxe, Elias Ashmole (see 56), Dean Milman, and Bishop Heber, who when a student here occupied rooms on the ground floor, right of No. 4 staircase, which are still overshadowed by a noble chestnut tree in the neighbouring garden of Exeter College (62), hence called Bishop Heber's Tree. The late Mr. Walter Pater was a Brasenose man.

Extensive additions have recently been made to the college. New buildings, comprising more than twenty sets of rooms, two lecture-rooms, a reading-room, and various offices, occupy the site of old Broadgates Hall, more lately called "Amsterdam," anciently a place of considerable importance, and at one time a recognised asylum for petty criminals. And by the extension of the college to the southward, a really magnificent frontage to the High street is gained. The buildings comprise a grand Entrance Gateway and Tower, with richly carved details, a residence for the Principal, and five sets of rooms for undergraduates; and this new South front, with its bold gables and fine range of oriel windows, forms a worthy addition to the beauties of the High-street. Mr. T. G. Jackson is the architect.

Crossing the High Street at St. Mary's Church (20), we notice that another wing remains to be built to the west of Brasenose tower, in completion of the new front. In a narrow lane opposite, named Oriel-street, we find on our left hand

23. St. Mary Hall. The site was anciently occupied by the parsonage of St. Mary-the-Virgin's, presented in 1325 by King Edward II. to Oriel College (24), by which society it was converted into a separate place of education in 1333. About the year 1451, Bedell Hall, founded in 1294, was also conveyed to the same college by the University, and added to the site. The buildings now consist of a small quadrangle, formed by the Principal's lodgings on the N., the Hall and Chapel (1639-40) on the S., and apartments for students on the E. and W. sides.

ORIEL COLLEGE.

Among the famous men who studied in this house were Sir Thomas More (whose portrait after Holbein adorns the Hall), and George Sandys the poet.

Adjoining St. Mary Hall is its parent society,—

24. Oriol College, founded by King Edward II., at the suggestion of his almoner, Adam de Brome, on the 12th April, 1326. The King bestowed on the society a large messuage known as "La Oriole," whence the present name of the college is derived.* The college was incorporated in 1603 by letters patent of King James I. The Hall was built in 1637, and has since been restored and improved. It is entered by an embattled portico approached by a flight of steps. Over the entrance are statues of the Virgin and Child, with those of Kings Edward II.

DINING HALL, ORIEL COLLEGE.

and III. in canopied niches under a semi-circular pediment. The room is of noble proportions, and its oaken roof is one of the finest in Oxford; on the walls are several portraits of eminent persons connected with the college, including Edward II., Sir Walter Raleigh, Queen Anne, Bp. Butler, Cardinal Newman (by Oules), &c. There are also some elegant specimens of ancient art, in the shape of two drinking cups, one said to have been the gift of Edward II., the other a cocoa-nut in silver gilt, presented by Bishop Carpenter in the 15th century. The Chapel (adjoining the Hall to the S.) was completed in 1642. It has been altered at various dates, most recently in 1884-5 by Mr. T. G. Jackson, when a new E. window was added in memory of the late Provost. The Library, in the Ionic order (by Wyatt, 1788), is on the N. side of the second quadrangle, on the site of an older room originally erected in 1444. It contains many rare books, including the "Parliamentary Records" and other works by Prynne the republican and antiquary. In the Common Room on the ground floor are portraits, among others, of Bishops Ken, Morley, Seth Ward, and Copleston; together with a celebrated painting of the Italian poets by Vasari.

* Oriol is an old French word meaning any portico, recess, or small room which was more private and better ornamented than the rest of the building. It is derived from the Latin aureolum, gilded, ornamented with gold.

Oriel is peculiarly rich in biographical reminiscences. We find on its books in bygone years the names of Langlande, author of Piers Ploughman; Sir Walter Raleigh, Prynne, and Bishop Butler; and in later times many of its members took a conspicuous part in the "Tractarian" movement. John Keble (see 10) at the early age of eighteen became a Fellow of the college, and took his place at the high table and senior common-room, among that remarkable body of men which even then gave the intellectual tone to the University, and afterwards, by the gradual accretion of men of marked ability and kindred thought, became a centre of influence which well-nigh revolutionized the Church of England. Copleston and Davison were the leaders in the endless discussions of the common-room when Keble entered it almost simultaneously with Whately; Newman, Arnold, Pusey, and many lesser lights were afterwards added. Bps. Wilberforce and Hampden were also members of this college.

Almost opposite Oriel is a lofty arch flanked with fluted Doric columns, called Canterbury Gate. It was built by Wyatt in 1778, and forms the entrance to one of the smaller quadrangles of Christ Church, named "Canterbury Quad." (see page 69) from a college formerly standing on this site, founded 1363, of which Wycliffe (see Nos. 14, 20, 26, 60) was first warden, and Sir Thomas More was sometime a student. Close to this gateway is

25. Corpus Christi College,* founded in 1516 by Richard Fox, Bp. of Winchester, Keeper of the Privy Seal to Henry VII. and Henry VIII.

It was dedicated "to the honour of the most precious Body of our Lord Jesus Christ, of His most spotless Mother, and of all the Saints Patrons of the Cathedral Churches of Winchester, Durham, Bath and Wells, and Exeter."

Bishop Fox's original design was to erect a seminary for eight monks of St. Swithun's Priory in Winchester, with a few secular scholars. But this plan was altered, it is said at the suggestion of Hugh Oldham, Bp. of Exeter, who remonstrated thus: "What, my lord! shall we build houses and provide livelihoods for a company of buzzing monks, whose end and fall we ourselves may live to see? No, no! it is more meet a great deal, that we should have care to provide for the increase of learning, and for such as by their learning shall do good in the church and commonwealth." Bishop Oldham followed up this advice by giving 6,000 marks towards the building of Corpus Christi College. This institution was the first in Oxford in which any regular provision was made for the cultivation of Greek and Latin: the appointment by its founder of two professors for these languages being the first noteworthy attempt to depart from the narrow plan of education which had previously prevailed in the University.

CORPUS CHRISTI COLLEGE.

* Some important additions were made to this College in 1885, by the erection of new buildings on the opposite side of the way, at the corner of Grove-street, at a cost of about £4,000, from the original and characteristic designs of Mr. T. G. Jackson.

Entering by the tower gateway, with fine vaulted roof, we have on our left hand the Hall, which possesses a good timber roof of the 16th cent., and contains portraits of benefactors. In the Library, on the south side are many ancient volumes and some rare M.SS. The Chapel (1517) has an altar-piece by Rubens, representing the Adoration. The cylindrical Sun-dial standing in the centre of the quadrangle (see engraving, p. 53) was constructed in 1605 by Charles Turnbull, a Fellow of the college. On its summit are carved the arms of Henry VII., the University, and Bps. Fox and Oldham; and beneath these is the dial, exhibiting a curious perpetual calendar. Through the adjoining cloister we reach a modern range, called "Turner's Buildings" (after a former President by whom they were built in 1706) and the Gardens beyond, whence is obtained a good view of Christ Church meadow walks (p. 60). Several objects of antiquarian interest are treasured as relics in this college: among them the Founder's

BP, FOX'S CROSIER. pastoral staff, in perfect preservation, though nearly four centuries old. It is six feet in length, of silver gilt, elegantly ornamented, and in beauty only second to the one preserved at New College (see page 24). There is besides an original portrait of Bp. Fox, executed by a Fleming named Joannes Corvus, early in the reign of Henry VIII. ; also the founder's sacramental plate, and other interesting and valuable articles.

Corpus Christi has had from its foundation a great reputation for learning, and has numbered many remarkable men among its members—conspicuously Bp. Jewell and the “judicious” Hooker. In the list of modern worthies stands prominently the name of John Keble (10), who in his fifteenth year was elected to a scholarship here, which he held until, on taking a “double first” at his final examination, he gained a fellowship at Oriel (24) at the age of eighteen.

Next to Corpus eastward is 26. Merton College, in many respects one of the most interesting foundations in the University. It competes with Balliol (60) for the honour of being the oldest college in Oxford—having been founded in 1264 by Walter de Merton, Bishop of Rochester and Lord High Chancellor, who originally instituted a house for students at Malden in Surrey, which was transferred to Oxford in 1274.

ARMS OF MERTON.

They were a body of secular students, not required to enter into holy orders (“qui non religiosi, religiosi viverent”); and if they took the vows of any among the monastic orders they ceased ipso facto to be members of the college. The Fellows of Merton early acquired a reputation for free speech and bold speculation. Wycliffe was one of them (see 14, 20, 60). They were among the earliest of the Lollards, and were in fact called Lollards till the end of the 17th century.

The Chapel, formerly also the Church of St. John Baptist, is the first object which claims special attention. The Chapel was built 1264-1310; the high altar dedicated 1277; Transepts 1414; Tower 1444. The visitor cannot fail to be struck with the extent and beauty of the Choir as seen from Merton-street, and the bold effect of the Tower and transepts. The original design apparently was for a cathedral-shaped edifice on the usual cruciform ground-plan, the tower and transepts plainly showing traces of a projected extension westward. We enter the college by the principal gateway, which is surmounted by figures of the founder and Henry III., and a curious sculpture of St. John Baptist preaching in the wilderness; and passing through an iron gate on our right into the old burial ground, we gain access to the interior of the Chapel by a small door on the E. side of the North transept, and are at once impressed with the grand proportions of the towerarches.

On entering we notice on our left a mural tablet of white marble, beautifully carved in relief by Woolner, in memory of the martyred Bishop Patteson, sometime a Fellow of this college. Beneath this is the oldest memorial brass, dated 1310. In the transepts are also monuments to Anthony à Wood, Sir Thos. Bodley (see 6), and Sir H. Savile; and tablets to Lieut. Grimshaw and Canon Noel Freeling.

The Choir is an early and very fine example of the geometrical Decorated style of the 13th cent. contemporary with Cologne Cathedral. Its fourteen side windows, of diverse yet harmonious design (the upper lights retaining their original glass, A.D. 1283); its splendid East window, of exquisite tracery, although somewhat marred by the painted glass with which the lower lights were filled in 1702; its elaborately carved sedilia, well-preserved memorial brasses (dated 1387, 1420, 1471), brass lectern of the 15th century, and richly illuminated roof, decorated in 1850-1, combine to form an ensemble rarely equalled. The altar-piece is ascribed to Tintoretto. Returning to the First Quadrangle, we notice on our right the glorious East window (p. 58), close to which is the Sacristy, temp. Edw. II.

MERTON COLLEGE GATEWAY.

Having served for many years the purposes of a brew-house, this Sacristy was carefully restored in 1887 under the direction of Mr. Jackson, when an interesting staircase of the 15th century was brought to light. In the N. wall is a curious little window or "squin," from which, it is said, the celebration of Holy Communion in the adjoining Chapel was witnessed by Queen Henrietta when residing here, while the King was at Ch. Ch. during the Civil Wars.

On the S. side of the quadrangle is the Hall, one of the most interesting as well as the most ancient of college refectories. It was reconstructed in 1872 by Sir G. G. Scott, the original oak door with iron hinge-mountings (circa 1320) being retained. On the walls are portraits of the founder, Duns Scotus, Bp. Jewell, and other celebrities. Leaving the First Quadrangle through a low archway W. of the Hall, we pass to our right, under an ancient Muniment-room or Treasury of the 13th cent., with quaint high-pitched roof of stone, into the Mob Quadrangle, containing on its S. side the venerable Library, certainly one of the most ancient in the kingdom: its narrow lancet-shaped windows with trefoil heads indicating its antiquity. It was built in 1349 by William Rede, Bp. of Chichester, on the site of an older structure; but the dormer windows in the roof were added some centuries later, in the reign of James I., when the interior was fitted up as it now remains, an extremely interesting specimen of an old English library.

Beyond another stone-groined archway at the N.W. angle of the Library Quadrangle, and in startling contrast with these venerable monastic relics, is a new building erected in 1864 for the accommodation of additional students.

Retracing our steps to the First Quad., we pass E. of the Hall, into the Fellows' Quadrangle, 1610, under a wide-spanned arch with remarkable vaulted roof, having among its bosses the arms of Henry VII. surrounded by the signs of the zodiac. Opposite us is an imitation of the Schools Tower (5) minus the first or Tuscan stage; and beyond this is a Garden and terrace-walk on a portion of the old city wall, which affords a most delightful prospect, from Magdalen Tower (17) on the left to Christ Church (29) on the right. Dr. Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was once Warden of this College. Connected with Merton, and communicating with it on the east side of the First Quadrangle, is a group of buildings until 1882 known as St. Alban Hall (27), which was founded in 1230 by Robert de St. Alban, a citizen of Oxford, who gave it with another tenement called Nun Hall to the nuns of Littlemore. These houses were subsequently leased to Merton College: but at the dissolution of Littlemore nunnery for the founding of Wolsey's College (29), St. Alban Hall became his property, and on his fall it came into the hands of Henry VIII., from whom it ultimately passed to Merton College in 1549. This Hall was rebuilt in 1600, and further enlarged and improved in 1863 and 1866. In its quadrangle is a quaint gabled bell-turret worthy of notice. By virtue of a statute made in 1881 by the University Commissioners, St. Alban Hall is now formally united with Merton College. On leaving Merton, we retrace our steps past the Chapel, remarking the grotesque carving of the gurgoyles or water-spouts from its roof, and turn to the left through a gateway adjoining the N. transept leading to Merton Fields, whence from various points many of the collegiate buildings may be seen; the Cathedral (29) being a prominent object on our right. The fine avenue of elms facing us, named the Broad Walk, communicates at each end with a delightful river-side walk, a mile and a quarter in extent, surrounding a large meadow, known as Christ Church Meadow.* The Broad Walk was formerly much frequented by visitors on the Sunday in Commemoration week, hence popularly called "Show Sunday." Near the W. end of the Broad Walk, an avenue planted a few years since (marked "New Walk" in Plan) leads directly to the River Isis, a classic name applied to that part of the Thames which flows by the classic University. The Oxfordshire shore is lined with barges, some of which are occupied by the proprietors of rowing boats, but the more handsome ones by the Rowing Clubs of the various colleges. These are in fact floating club-houses, well supplied with newspapers, periodicals, writing materials, and every accommodation for members who indulge in aquatic exercise. The University Boat Club barge, represented to the right of our engraving (p. 61) was designed by Mr. Bruton. The other barge seen in the illustration (but not now in the position there shown) was formerly the state barge of the Stationers' Company of London.

MERTON COLLEGE CHAPEL, FROM THE EAST.

BY THE CHERWELL, CHRIST CHURCH MEADOW.

* This meadow was the gift of Lady Elizabeth Montacute (see page 64).

On the river in summer-time a most animated sight is presented by the numberless craft, from canoes to eight-oars, which crowd its surface.

During the Lent and Summer Terms the Boat-races are rowed here, when the crews of the various Colleges compete for the glory of heading the river. The Procession of Boats was wont to be one of the most popular events of Commemoration week. About fifty eight-oars, each manned by nine men in jerseys of distinctive colours, rowed in procession past the University Barge, which was crowded with fair spectators, manifesting delighted interest in the pretty sight, as the boats in their order passed the fortunate crew who were "head of the river," and gave a hearty salute by adroitly tossing their oars in the air—an achievement which when clumsily attempted sometimes entailed the punishment of submersion, to the no small merriment of thousands of spectators. By a resolution of the O. U. B. C. in Oct., 1893, this custom is now discontinued.

CLUB BARGES ON THE ISIS.

Returning by the new avenue, and recrossing the Broad Walk at its western extremity, we approach the noble buildings and spacious quadrangles of the most magnificent academic and religious foundation in Europe,—

ARMS OF CH. CH.

28-31. Christ Church.* Facing us are the New Buildings (28), an extensive range erected in 1862-6, and containing fifty sets of rooms for students' lodgings. Passing through the tower gateway of this Meadow Front and leaving the Chaplains' Quadrangle on our left, we pass through the Cloisters (15th cent.), lately restored, to the S. side of

29. The Cathedral, which is both the chapel of Christ Church and the chief church of the diocese of Oxford. It is open for the inspection of visitors daily from 11 to 1 and from 2.30 till 4.30. The entrance is by the W. door in the Great Quadrangle.

This venerable pile boasts an antiquity far greater than that of the collegiate establishment with which it is now combined. Standing under its shadow, let us take a rapid glance at the history of both. The earliest annals of the church carry us back to Saxon times, and connect themselves with the almost legendary history of a religious house, founded by St. Frideswide, who died A.D. 740. In 1180 her remains were removed "from an obscure to a more noted place in the church." At this date the main fabric of the present church was complete, having been restored by Prior Guimond, 1120-1180; and the massive columns and arches were then substantially the same as we see them now. In 1289 a new and more worthy shrine for her relics was solemnly dedicated, and this was again replaced in 1480 by one still more superb, which remains (see p. 65). Fragments of the earlier (13th cent.) monument, recently discovered, have been carefully placed and partially restored on the S. side of the Lady Chapel, probably their original position. St. Frideswide's Priory was finally surrendered to Henry VIII. in 1522, and by him transferred to Cardinal Wolsey, then in the zenith of his prosperity. This eminent prelate had resolved to found an institution to be called "Cardinal's College," where the new learning, then pouring over Europe, should be cultivated in the service of the old Church, on a scale of such magnificence that no other foundation in Europe should be able to compare with it. The first stone of

* For the sake of distinctness, the principal buildings of Christ Church are separately numbered on our Plan, from 28 to 31 inclusive. It should be observed that in pursuing the course of our walk we have approached Christ Church from the East and shall leave by the usual Western entrance in St. Aldate's (see page 69). A visitor entering through "Tom" gateway would have to reverse the order of description, beginning at No. 31 (page 70) and tracing back to No. 28 on this page.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, FROM THE CLOISTERS.

Wolsey's College was laid July 16, 1525, but the completion of this grand project was prevented by his attainder in 1529. Henry VIII. then took possession of all the revenues which had been appropriated to Wolsey's design, and in 1532 founded a college here which he named King Henry VIII.'s College. In 1546, having created the bishopric of Oxford, first established at Osney Abbey in the western suburb, he connected the new see with his recently founded college, naming it Ecclesia Christi Cathedralis Oxoniense, The Cathedral Church of Christ in Oxford. Christ Church is therefore an instance, without parallel, of the union of a cathedral and a collegiate foundation. Its proper title being Aedes Christi (not Collegium), it is never styled "College," but is spoken of by its members as "The House." A curious illustration of its mixed constitution is afforded by the fact that although the diocesan is known as Bishop of Oxford, one never hears of the Dean of Oxford or the Canons of Oxford, but they are always described as the Dean and Canons of Christ Church.

While to some extent the Cathedral is a type of the transition between the Norman and Early English styles, yet traces of the earlier Saxon church have recently been brought to light at the E. end, and Mr. Park Harrison has shown the probability that at least in the Choir we have some of the pre-Norman work of King Æthelred II., who restored the church about A.D. 1004.

The beautiful vaulted roof of the Choir is attributed to Cardinal Wolsey. The E. end was reconstructed in 1871 by Sir G. G. Scott to harmonize with the original Norman work; the whole interior has since been greatly improved, the nave extended one bay westward, the Cloisters restored, and a new W. entrance opened from the Great Quadrangle (see page 68).

On the S. side of the choir an Episcopal Throne has been erected at the cost of £1,000, as a memorial to the late Bishop Wilberforce; a life-like medallion portrait of this prelate is conspicuous among its profuse wood-carving. The Lectern was presented by the Censors of the House, and the Bible (17th cent.) by three daughters of Dean Liddell. A beautiful Reredos in sandstone and rosso antico, richly gilded, has recently been added. N. of the Choir is the Lady Chapel, which was greatly altered in the Early English period, its delicately moulded shafts contrasting with the massive piers. The Latin Chapel (adjoining, N.), so called because the Latin prayers were formerly read here, contains some of the carved woodwork of Wolsey's time (see p. 65). It is said to have been built by Lady Elizabeth de Montacute, who died in 1359. Her tomb adjoins the reputed shrine of St. Frideswide (shown to the right of our view), whose career is illustrated in the glass of the modern window (1859). The other tombs on the S. side of the Latin Chapel are those of a prior, fully robed, believed to be Alex. de Sutton, prior of St. Frideswide's, 1294-1316, and

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL

LATIN CHAPEL, CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL.

SHOWING ST. FRIDESWIDE'S WINDOW AND REPUTED SHRINE.

Sir George Nowers, a companion of the Black Prince, who died 1425. At the angle of the S. aisle of choir and the S. transept is the tomb of Bp. King, last Abbot of Osney and first Bp. of Oxford (see p. 71, also Appendix): his effigy may be seen in a small window close by. On the E. side of the S. transept is St. Lucy's Chapel, with its curious Becket window, c. 1330, in which the head of the murdered prelate is obliterated, it is said by royal command. A slab of marble in the floor of the nave covers the grave of Dr. Pusey. Inlaid in lead is a Latin inscription to his memory and that of his wife and two daughters with whom he lies buried. On the wall of the S. aisle are a life-like bust in white marble of the late Prince Leopold, a tablet in memory of the late Bp. Mackarness, and a medallion portrait of the wife of Sir Henry Acland. The great window in the N. transept, representing the triumph of St. Michael the Archangel, was presented by the Marquis of Lothian in 1876. Sir E. Burne Jones' windows are deserving of special notice. One, in memory of Mr. Vyner, murdered by Greek brigands in 1870, is at the E. end of the Lady Chapel; "St. Cecilia's" adjoins it in the N. aisle of choir; and in the S. aisle, also at the E. end, is "St. Catherine of Alexandria," in memory of the late Miss Edith Liddell. Another by this artist, subject, "Faith, Hope, and Charity," is at the W. end of the S. aisle. In memory of the late Canon Liddon the south window in the South transept has been filled with glass (Clayton and Bell, 1894), and an inscription on a brass tablet has been placed on the S.W. column of the nave, beneath the organ-loft.

Full choral Cathedral service is performed here daily, at 10 and 5, open to the public; and there is also an earlier and a later service, the former attended by all the members of the House. We advise visitors who may spend a Sunday in Oxford, especially in term-time, not to miss evening prayers at 5 o'clock. There still survives here a 'use' adopted in honour of Henry VIII., the royal founder of the House, viz.: the repetition of the versicle and response, "O Lord, save the Queen," &c., before the Prayer for the Queen's Majesty.

The Chapter House, adjoining the S. transept, a beautiful specimen of Early English (restored in 1879), is entered from the cloisters by a fine Norman doorway. In its E. wall is preserved the foundation stone of Wolsey's College at Ipswich, A.D. 1528.

Through a low arched passage between the S. transept and the Chapter House, access is gained to a small enclosure used as a burial-ground. In the "stillness and seclusion" of this quiet nook, just beneath her memorial window, is the simple grave of a daughter of Dean Liddell; and here also the late Dr. Pusey's only son lies buried. The S.E. view of the Cathedral from this spot is one of the most impressive.

Under the new Belfry Tower, completed in 1879 for the reception of the sweet-toned bells from the Cathedral tower—originally in Osney Abbey—we now ascend the Hall Staircase, admiring the elegant fan-tracery of the stone roof (1640), supported by a single slender pillar, and enter (on payment of 2*d.*)

30. Christ Church Hall, the grandest of all mediæval Halls in the kingdom, save that at Westminster.

DINING HALL, CHRIST CHURCH.

Its length is 115 ft., breadth 40 ft., height 50 ft.* Its lofty roof (dated 1529; repaired, after fire, 1720) is of Irish oak, decorated with armorial bearings. In this room a banquet was given to Henry VIII. in 1533; dramatic representations were witnessed here by Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I.; and here in 1644 the latter monarch assembled those members of Parliament who remained faithful to his failing cause. The dais or high table at the upper end of the room is lighted on the S. side by a large and splendid oriel window recently filled (by Messrs. Burlison & Grylls) with exquisitely wrought full-length portraits of Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Thomas More, Erasmus, Earl Surrey, Abp. Warham, Dean Colet, Linacre, and Lily. The series is now (1894) continued in the lower lights of the window on the N. side, by portraits of four Ch. Ch. worthies of the 17th century : Burton, Fell, Aldrich, and Locke. The upper lights were inserted in 1867 in commemoration of the membership of the Prince of Wales and Prince Frederick of Denmark.

The walls are adorned with a magnificent collection of portraits of persons belonging to the foundation, by eminent painters ; among them, Holbein, Sir Peter Lely, Vandyke, Hogarth, Gainsborough, Sir Godfrey Kneller, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Sir Martin Shee. Holbein's picture of Wolsey gives a view, the oldest and most authentic, of the earlier buildings,—Cathedral, Hall, and Kitchen. Over all presides Holbein's striking portrait of Henry VIII. Among the latest additions to this grand collection are life-like portraits of Mr. Gladstone by Sir J. E. Millais, Dr. Liddon by Prof. Herkomer, and Dr. Pusey by Prof. Richmond—the two latter added in 1891.

Leaving the Hall, we descend by a staircase on our right to the Kitchen, of considerable antiquarian interest, having been the first building completed by Wolsey, and remaining almost unchanged to this day. Here is a monster gridiron on wheels, a curious relic of the old cuisine. Returning under the Hall staircase through the Bell-tower gateway (with statue of Wolsey) we reach the Great Quadrangle, 264 feet by 261, the noblest and most spacious in Oxford, and forming part of Cardinal Wolsey's original plan, although the N. side was not completed till 1668. Great improvements have been effected here by recent restorations : notably the Bell Tower, the parapet and pinnacles surmounting the Hall, and the arches and rib-mouldings indicative of the original design for a grand cloister. The eastern terrace-walk leads us past the Deanery to a Tower gateway at the opposite angle. On its S. side is a statue of Bp. Fell ; and on the N. side one of Dr. Liddell, the late eminent Dean, by Mr. Dressler, 1893. Beyond this gateway is Peckwater Quadrangle, on the site of a certain Peckwater's Inn. The present buildings were erected about 1705 in the revised "classic" style from designs by Dean Aldrich. On the right is the Library, a massive edifice (built 1716-1761); open in Term time from 11 to 1 and from 2 to 4: and during the summer vacation at other hours. (Fee 3*d*.) It contains on its lower floor a choice collection of paintings, rich in specimens of the early Italian schools. A catalogue may be procured at the library. In the lobby are marble busts of the Four Georges, with statues of Bp. Jackson and others. On the upper floor is a fine collection of books, the donations of Abp. Wake, Dean Aldrich, and other benefactors, with oriental coins, MSS. of great historic interest, and other valuable curiosities. The smaller court beyond is Canterbury Quadrangle, its gateway opening into Merton-street, close to Corpus Christi College (see page 53).

THE GREAT QUADRANGLE, CHRIST CHURCH.

Christ Church has been the foster-mother of many of the most celebrated Englishmen. To quote from Mr. Arnold's work, Oxford and Cambridge:—"Look at our recent history: Lords Elgin and Dalhousie, Sir George Cornewall Lewis, the great Sir Robert Peel, and Canning, were all Christ Church men. Among the statesmen of the past we may name Godolphin, Nottingham, Arlington, Wyndham, Carteret, Bolingbroke, Grenville, Lyttelton, Mansfield. One might construct a good portion of the history of England out of the lives of these great men. Perhaps the foremost name of Christ Church worthies will be considered to be that of John Locke. And then there are such men as Ben Jonson and Sir Philip Sydney among poets, and Casaubon and Gaisford among scholars." Of modern statesmen, Christ Church has furnished three Premiers in succession: Mr. Gladstone, Lord Salisbury, and Lord Rosebery. John and Charles Wesley, the famous leaders of the religious revival of the last century, were members of the House; and the late Dr. Pusey was for more than half-a-century one of the Canons in residence.

We now retrace our steps into the Great Quadrangle, and quit the precincts of Christ Church by the grand gateway under 31. "Tom" Tower,* so called because containing "Great Tom," a bell formerly belonging to Osney Abbey, but recast in 1680, and weighing nearly 18,000 lbs. It may be seen on application to the porter and payment of a fee of 2*d*. Every night at 9.5 "Tom" tolls a curfew of 101 strokes, as a signal for the closing of college gates. The Entrance Gateway, well worthy of its old name, "The Faire Gate," was erected to the height of the two smaller towers by Cardinal Wolsey, whose statue is over the gateway; but the Bell-tower was added by Sir Christopher Wren, about 1682.

Beneath the noble archway let us turn to observe the very striking effect of the quadrangle,—Hall, Belfry, &c.—as seen from this point: and then, stepping out into St. Aldate's-street, gain our final impression of Christ Church from its grand West front (see illustration, page 71).

At the S. end of this front a lane (shown in our Plan) leads directly to the Broad Walk, the Meadow, and the river Isis (see page 60 and end of book).

Near the "Meadow Gate" stood the South Gate of the City (demolished 1771); and on the opposite side of the street, just below, is an ancient and picturesquely gabled house, believed to have been the palace of Bishop King, the last Abbot of Osney and first Bishop of Oxford,* 1542-57, whose tomb is in the S. aisle of the Cathedral (see p. 66). Further S., on the site of the present bridge over the Isis, was a tower said to have been occupied as an observatory by Friar Bacon,* and afterwards leased to a citizen named Welcome, who added another storey, hence called "Welcome's Folly." This bridge thus acquired the title of Folly Bridge, which it still retains, although the tower was pulled down in 1779.

* Should the visitor, by preference or chance, have entered Christ Church by "Tom" gate, he will find it necessary to reverse the order of the description, beginning with No. 31 on this page and tracing back to No. 28 on page 62.

From this bridge an excellent view is obtained of the course of the river Isis towards Iffley, gay with barges; also of the new University Boat-house on the Berkshire bank. From the landing-stage pleasure parties start for Nuneham, and steam-boats ply frequently during the summer months (see end of book). Beyond is the rapidly growing suburb of Grandpont, with its new Church of St. Matthew, erected in 1891 on a site presented by Brasenose College.

32. St. Aldate's Church, facing Christ Church, built about 1318, enlarged and improved in 1862, is now one of the most handsome, spacious, and commodious of the city churches. The spire, rebuilt in 1874, though small is extremely elegant. Over the S. aisle, 1335-6, there was formerly an upper storey containing a Library for the use of students in Civil Law who frequented the adjacent Hall, once called Broadgates, but converted in 1624 into

TOM TOWER, CH. CH., W. FRONT.

* Engravings of Friar Bacon's Study and Bp. King's Palace are given in the chapter on "Old Oxford" appended to the shilling edition of this Guide.

ARMS OF PEMBROKE.

33. Pembroke College, endowed by Thomas Tesdale, Esq., and Richard Wightwick, B.D., and named after William, Earl of Pembroke, then Chancellor of the University, with whose consent the change was made. Camden the antiquary, Beaumont the dramatist, and Pym the puritan, were members of Broadgates Hall.

The most conspicuous memory associated with Pembroke College is that of Dr. Johnson; his rooms were on the second floor over the entrance-gateway. In the Library they have his bust by Bacon, and in the Hall his portrait by Reynolds, while some of his college exercises and prayers in manuscript are treasured among the archives. George Whitefield the preacher, Blackstone the lawyer, Shenstone the poet, Sir Thomas Browne the metaphysician, and many other worthies were members of Pembroke College.

Almost all the present buildings are quite modern. The Chapel, a fair specimen of the heavy classic of the Georgian period, was begun in 1728, the year of Dr. Johnson's entrance into the college, and consecrated by Bp. Potter in 1732.

Its interior, hitherto plain even to ugliness, was in 1885 transformed into "a thing of beauty," from designs by Mr. C. E. Kemp. The Reredos consists of beautifully veined pale marble columns enclosing a fine painting copied from a Rubens at Antwerp, over a super-altar of carved alabaster. The windows are filled with stained glass, and the walls and ceiling glow with gold and colours.

In 1829-30 the N. front of the college and other portions were altered to the Gothic style; in 1854-6 a West wing was built, the Fellows' buildings were added, and the Library, formerly used as a Hall, was greatly improved. In 1890 a gallery was added to provide room for the large bequest of books from the late Prof. Chandler's collection. The new Hall, facing it, was erected in 1848. Its stained glass windows bear the arms of benefactors, and there are several portraits on its walls. The fine lawn, and the luxurious growth of creepers on the walls, give this quadrangle a very pretty effect.

The old Almshouses in St. Aldate's, opposite Christ Church, originally founded by Cardinal Wolsey, but not completed till 1834, were in 1889 annexed to Pembroke College. In Brewer-street, just below, a new House for the Master and boys of the Cathedral Choir has been erected from the excellent designs of Mr. H. W. Moore, 1894.

Pursuing our course up St. Aldate's-street, we pass on our left the

34. Post Office, a handsome and commodious building completed in 1880.* On the opposite side of the street are the

35. New Municipal Buildings, now in course of erection. The foundation stone was laid on the Royal Wedding Day, July 6th, 1893, by the Mayor (T. Lucas, Esq.). The apartments will comprise a spacious Town Hall, Council Chamber, Assembly Room, Public Library, Police Court and station, and various municipal offices. Mr. H. T. Hare is the architect.

A few steps northward, we arrive at the spot (X in Plan) called Carfax.* Here the two main thoroughfares, running N. to S. and E. to W., cross at right angles. At Carfax stood in olden time the picturesque Conduit erected in 1610 by Otho Nicholson for the supply of the city with water. It was taken down in 1787, and removed to Nuneham Park.† At the N.W. corner stands

36. St. Martin's (Carfax), the City Church, occupying the site of the earliest parish church in Oxford of which there is any record. It was granted in 1034 by Canute to the Benedictine monks of Abingdon, and from time immemorial has been identified with municipal affairs: the port-mote or town's meeting was held in the churchyard until Henry II.'s reign, and civic business was transacted on this spot for many centuries later; while in the mediæval battles between "town" and "gown," St. Martin's was the rallying-place for the citizens, as St. Mary's (20) was for the students. The tower, restored a few years since, is probably of the time of Edward III., and, with a font of the same date, is the only remnant of the older church, which was rebuilt 1830-32.

In the year 1585, when preachers were scarce, and a Romish reaction was feared, the Corporation of the city appointed lectureships at Carfax, contempo-ranously with the institution of the University sermons at St. Mary's (20); and since that date the Mayor and Corporation have been accustomed to attend officially the Sunday morning services. At the E. end of the old church were formerly two figures which struck the chimes with hammers. There was also a covered shed at the E. end, built or rebuilt in 1546, called "Pennyless bench." Becoming a resort for idle and disorderly people, it was removed in 1747; but until recently the spot has been a favourite rendezvous of "pennyless" loungers. The living of St. Martin's has now been united with that of All Saints' (65), and the church will shortly be demolished, for the widening of the thoroughfare.

* For time of despatch and delivery of mails, &c., see Alden's Oxford Almanack, price 1d.

† For the etymology of this word, see note on Nuneham, at the end of the book.

‡ See "By River to Nuneham," at the end, and the Appendix to the shilling edition.

Proceeding W., down Queen-street, and passing on our right a new and well-appointed Temperance Hotel, the "Wilberforce," we arrive at a point (near the site of the West Gate) where four streets meet—Castle-street, formerly the W. entrance to the city (here are the "barracks" of the Salvation Army, opened 1888); the New Road, leading to the railway stations; St. Ebbe's street, to the left (see No. 72); New-Inn-Hall street, to the right.

NEW ROAD CHAPEL.

The latter, once known as "Seven Deadly Sins lane," now abounds with places of worship, of which, by a curious coincidence, there are seven between New Road Chapel (37) at its southern, and George Street Chapel (43) facing its northern extremity, inclusive.

Nearly at the corner, beyond the disused burying ground of St. Peter-le-Bailey's (see No. 39), is situated the oldest place of Nonconformist worship in Oxford, 37. New Road Chapel. The church was re-constituted in 1780 by a union of Presbyterians with an older body of Baptists founded in 1618. The present building was opened in 1721, and enlarged and improved in 1819 and 1865. On the west side of New-Inn-Hall street is a Meeting Room for the "Brethren," erected 1877, and a few yards N. a building till lately known as

38. New Inn Hall, one of the old "inns" or halls for students, formerly called Trilleck's Inn. This inn was purchased in 1369 by William of Wykeham, and by him conveyed to New College (12), by which society it was rebuilt in 1460. During the Civil War, New Inn Hall was used by Charles I. as a mint, for coining into money the plate "requisitioned" from the colleges.

A new wing was added in 1832; and a Chapel for the use of students was built in 1861 by the last Principal, Dr. Cornish, at whose decease in 1877 the Hall ceased to have an independent existence, and it has now for some years been closed. Part of the Hall has been purchased from Balliol College for the purposes of a "Bp. Hannington Memorial Hall"; and other portions of the site have been acquired by the authorities of the adjoining Church (39) and Chapel (37) for the erection of School buildings and other much needed additions to their respective premises.

Hard by, on land anciently belonging to St. Frideswide (see page 62), is the Church of 39. St. Peter-le-Bailey, built 1872-4. The original site was at the S.W. corner of the street, where a church is known to have existed in the twelfth century, having been granted to St. Frideswide in a charter of Henry I.'s reign. It derived its name from its situation within the 'bailey' of the Castle (69). In 1706 the church fell down, and the edifice which succeeded it, erected in 1740, was demolished in 1872-3 for the widening of the roadway. The new church is designed in the style of the 14th century, having a square tower with turret. Mr. Basil Champneys, architect.

Opposite the church will be observed an old stone gateway, a relic of St. Mary's College, founded in 1435, and dissolved in Queen Elizabeth's time. Here in 1498 Erasmus prepared his edition of the Greek Testament. The gateway now leads to Freuen Hall, the house occupied by the Prince of Wales during his residence in Oxford.

A little further northward, the graceful and lofty spire of the 40. Wesley Memorial Church arrests our attention. In the early days of Methodism, which claims Oxford as its birthplace, its founder John Wesley (see 64) held preaching services in a house nearly opposite New Inn Hall. In 1818 a chapel was opened on a site in the rear of the present building ; on 28th June, 1877, the memorial stones of this church were laid, and dedication services were held on the 11th October, 1878. The church was designed by Mr. C. Bell in the Early Decorated style, and forms a conspicuous addition to the architectural adornments of the city.

A very efficient School for Boys is conducted in schools and classrooms at the rear, with Chemical Laboratory and other appliances of an organized Science School; and the old chapel is now divided into lecture-rooms, &c.,

OXFORD UNION SOCIETY'S ROOMS.

a portion being occupied by the Central School for Girls.

Making a short detour to the right, a few steps bring us to the 41. Methodist Free Church, built 1870-1 ; it has a large room in the basement, used as a Sunday School and for lectures, &c.

The Society was founded in 1849 by a secession from the Methodist body, and has since become incorporated with the United Methodist Free Churches.

Opposite are the premises of the

42. Oxford Union Society, a social, literary, and debating Club for University men, founded in 1823. The Library, shown to the right of our engraving, was built in 1856 for a Debating-room, from designs by Messrs. Deane and Woodward in the Early Decorated style, and is adorned with remarkable frescoes illustrative of the exploits of King Arthur and his Knights, the work of the late Mr. D. G. Rossetti and other famous amateurs.

The buildings on the left of the view comprise a Smoking-Room and Reading-rooms, with other offices. These apartments have recently been sumptuously refurnished and decorated. The Debates are now held in a new and more spacious detached building, erected in 1878 from designs by Mr. A. Waterhouse, further to the right. The Union Society numbers over 1,000 members, besides some 6,000 life members. Its fiftieth anniversary was celebrated in 1873 by a public banquet, at which speeches were delivered by many of its most eminent members, past and present, including the Marquis of Salisbury (Chancellor of the University), the late Lord Selborne, Archbishop Tait, and Cardinal Manning, and several leading members of both parties in the State. Opposite, at No. 18, is Turrell's Hall, removed in 1891 from "The Willows," Magdalen Bridge.

Retracing a few steps, and resuming our course northward, we notice on our right the Liberal Hall, opened on 9th Jan., 1879, by Sir W. Harcourt, and now the head-quarters of the Oxford Reform Club; on our left the Engine House of the Volunteer Fire Brigade; and facing us the

43. Congregational Church, built in 1832 in the Early English style, and improved in 1860 and 1893. In the basement is a School room, and at the rear, entered from Gloucester Green, is a well-designed building, erected in 1868, in which is conducted the Central School for Boys, under the control of a committee of citizens and members of the University. Nearly opposite the Chapel is the 43a. Oxford High School for Boys, a picturesque and substantially built structure, in the characteristic style of its popular architect, Mr. T. G. Jackson.

This enterprise was inaugurated at a public meeting held 9th Jan., 1878; the first stone of the building was formally laid by the late Prince Leopold on the 13th April, 1880; and the School was publicly opened on 15th Sept., 1881. The site and a large endowment were given by the City of Oxford; and the governing body of the school comprises representatives of the City and University. Several scholarships have been founded by private beneficence; the late Prof. T. H. Green was one of the governors and a generous donor to the school.

Higher up George-street, adjoining an old terrace (1661), is the

Y.M.C.A. ROOMS.

43b. New Theatre, opened in February, 1886; Mr. H. G. W. Drinkwater, architect. The theatre seats about 900 persons, and is well lighted and ventilated.

East of the Theatre is a handsome block of buildings, part of which is occupied by the Conservative and Unionist Club, opened May 26th, 1894, by the late Sir George Chesney, M.P. The central and W. portion was erected for the use of the local branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. The memorial stones were laid on 19th March, and the building opened 27th November, 1891. Lower down is 44. St. George's Church, built in 1849 as a Chapel of Ease for the parish of St. Mary Magdalene (59). Adjoining this is the New Corn Exchange and Fire Brigade Station. The stone-laying ceremony took place on Oct. 22, 1894.

Behind these buildings, accessible through a narrow lane lower down, is Gloucester Green, where a Cattle Market is periodically held; a Settling Room and pens, &c., for the accommodation of dealers, have been recently constructed. At the W. end stands a parochial boys' school; at the E. end is the Central Boys' School, mentioned on page 77: the City Gaol (erected 1789, demolished 1879) occupied the centre. At the south-west angle a neat brick and stone building was erected in 1887 for Cutler Boulter's Medical Dispensary, Mr. Bruton, architect. An outlet at the N.W. corner leads to

IN WORCESTER COLLEGE GARDENS.

45. Worcester College, on the site of an ancient institution called Gloucester Hall, founded in 1283 by John Gifford, Baron of Brimesfield, for Benedictine monks from Gloucester. This Hall was in 1560 conveyed to the President and Fellows of St. John's College (55), and was then known as St. John Baptist Hall. After long decay, it was refounded by Sir Thomas Cookes, of Bentley Pauncefoot, Worcestershire, for the education of students from his own county, the charter bearing date 1714.

ARMS OF WORCESTER.

The interior of the Chapel was in 1864-70 gorgeously decorated in the Romanesque style, with painting, gilding, alabaster, marbles, and mosaics, after designs by the late Mr. Buges. The decoration forms a complete scheme illustrative of the Te Deum and the Benedicite—Man and Nature uniting in Divine worship. The beautiful volumes of the Old and New Testament on the lectern will reward a close inspection. Connected with the Chapel by a stone-vaulted piazza is the Hall, a fine room, elegantly decorated and adorned with portraits; and over the arcade is the Library, containing a valuable collection of books. On the S. (left-hand) side of the large Quadrangle are some interesting vestiges of old Gloucester Hall, in the form of separate monastic houses, rebuilt in the fifteenth century. Our illustration on page 81 shows the back of these houses, facing the Garden.

Near to the S.W. corner of the quadrangle we enter through a narrow arch the delightful Gardens, usually open free to the public. Our illustration (p. 79) shows a pleasant nook by the Lake, which gives additional charm to this scene of sylvan beauty.

The street leading eastward from Worcester College to the Randolph Hotel is named Beaumont-street, from the royal palace of Beaumont.—built by Henry I., the residence of Henry II. and other monarchs, and the birthplace of Richard Cœur-de-Lion,—which stood near this spot.

Pursuing our way northward from Worcester College along Walton-street, we notice on the right the Clarendon Institute, a new building of red brick with stone dressings (architect, Mr. H. W. Moore). It was erected by the Delegates of the Press for the use of their employés, and opened by the Bp. of Oxford on 16th Sept., 1893. By Worcester-terrace, opposite (see Plan), 46. The Friends' Meeting House is approached, built in 1879 for the ministry of the late Rev. H. C. B. Bazely, of the Scotch Church. The Jewish Synagogue almost adjoins.

Further northward, on the right of Walton-street, is OLD HOUSES, WORCESTER COLLEGE.

47. St. Paul's, a district church in the Ionic order, built by subscription in 1836: an apse has since been added.

The memorial window to Canon Ridgway, representing the Sermon on the Mount, contains among its figures portraits of the Canon and some of his contemporaries. Other memorial windows have been added during recent years.

Just S. of the church are the new buildings of the Eye Hospital opened in March, 1895; and opposite is the extensive range completed in 1830 for the 1895.]

48. Clarendon Press, or University Printing Office, removed here from the old Clarendon Building in Broad street (7). This establishment is one of the largest in the world. The S. wing, denominated the "Bible Side," is devoted principally to the printing of Bibles and Prayer Books, for sale at the depôts of the Press in Oxford, London, and Edinburgh, as well as for the British and Foreign Bible Society and the S.P.C.K. In the N. wing—generally called the "Learned Side,"—works of a learned and educational character are chiefly produced.

In the large Machine-room, 200 ft. by 70 ft., and rooms adjoining, 113 printing and other machines, including five rolling machines, and in the binding department 28 folding, sewing, and other machines, are at work by steam power. There are also stereotype, electrotypes, and type Foundries, engineer's department, ink and roller manufactories, ware-rooms, drying-rooms, &c. Another feature is the drying of printed sheets, for books which are required quickly, by means of hot air kept in motion by a steam screw-propeller 4 ft. in diameter. There is also a photographic department, in which fac-similes of MSS. and other illustrations are printed by various processes. In the Press are preserved the matrices for founts of Greek, old English, and Oriental type, some of which were presented to the University in 1669 by Bp. Fell. Stereotype and electrotypes plates, and formes in movable type, are kept in a fire-proof room specially built in 1886, which is the largest in England. In the quadrangle is the residence of the present Controller of the Press, Mr. Horace Hart, upon whom devolves the supreme management in conjunction with a board of Delegates appointed by the University, and from whom orders for admission can be procured. The late venerable Superintendent of the Press, Mr. Thomas Combe, founded in the vicinity a district Church dedicated to

49. St. Barnabas, opened Oct. 19, 1869. It is situated on the E. bank of the canal, near the W. end of Cardigan-street, in the populous neighbourhood called 'Jericho'; and is remarkable as a type of the Lombardic style of architecture, built in the basilica form, with apsidal East end and lofty detached campanile. (Architect, Sir A. Blomfield. Apse and E. walls decorated 1893.)

The services in this church are distinguished for high ritual. The altar is canopied with an elaborate "baldachino," and before it is suspended a handsome cross of open-work metal, set with brilliants. Portraits of Bp. Wilberforce, the founder, and others, are introduced in the carved capitals of the columns. In 1890 ten tubular bells (by Harrington, Coventry) were placed in the tower.

Further north is St. Sepulchre's Cemetery, with a neat chapel: and nearly opposite this is Walton Street Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1883. Passing along Kingston-road to its N. extremity, at the W. end of St. Margaret's road we reach St. Margaret's Church, opened in 1884 (N. aisle, 1890; S. aisle, 1891; consecrated 1893). It is connected with SS. Philip and James' Church (51), by whose clergy the services are conducted.

MEDLEY.

The E. window is the work of amateurs; and the clerestory windows, by Burlison and Grylls, contain effigies of local saints.

Extending to the W. and N. W. of this district is the large level area known as Port Meadow (i.e. the Town Meadow), the possession of the freemen of the city of Oxford from the time of the Domesday survey. On its borders are Medley, the starting-place for boating parties on the "Upper River" (see illustration); Binser, associated with St. Frideswide (see 29), and Godstow, the burial-place of Fair Rosamond, and a favourite river resort. Eastward, to the south of Observatory-street (see Plan) is the

50. Radcliffe Observatory, built 1772-5, from funds applied to the purpose by the trustees of Dr. Radcliffe (see 18, 21, and 53), on a piece of land, nine acres in extent, presented by the third Duke of Marlborough. The octagonal tower is copied from the Temple of the Winds at Athens, and is surmounted by a globe, borne by figures of Hercules and Atlas.

The buildings comprise a Library and Lecture Room, and contain some of the best modern astronomical instruments; there is also a dwelling-house for the Observer, who is appointed by the Radcliffe Trustees. Among the men most distinguished in astronomical science who have held the post of Radcliffe Observer, may be mentioned Professor Rigaud and Mr. Johnson. The grounds are entered by a gateway in the Woodstock road, and opposite, not far to the N., is

51. SS. Philip and James' Church (erected 1860, spire added 1866). The design is characteristic of its architect, Mr. Street, being in the Early Decorated style with some continental modifications. Columns of polished granite divide the broad nave from the aisles; the apsidal chancel is roofed with stone, and its reredos and other decorations are tasteful and elaborate. South of the church is a monastic-looking edifice known as

52. The Convent, 1866-8 (Buckeridge, architect), occupied by an Anglican sisterhood styled "The Society of the Holy and Undivided Trinity." A new Chapel was erected in 1892-3.

The society was established for the threefold purpose of prayer, work under the direction of the clergy, and preparing young girls for various stations in life. It conducts a boarding school for young ladies; an orphanage, chiefly for Oxford children, who are trained for domestic service; and a day-school with Kindergarten; besides evening classes, Sunday classes, &c.

The houses in this neighbourhood, on and near the Banbury and Woodstock roads and bordering on the Parks, amidst picturesque surroundings, are occupied chiefly by professors and resident members of the University, and the well-to-do class of citizens. The city is now almost united to the N. suburb of Summertown, where are situated St. Edward's School, St. John Baptist's Church, and a new Congregational Church.

On the Banbury-road, nearly facing the E. end of Bevington-road (see Plan) is Wykeham House, occupied during his residence in Oxford by the late Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany. The next house S. is 52a. Wycliffe Hall, a Theological Institution for candidates for Holy Orders, established on Evangelical Church principles in 1877: a chapel and other buildings were opened 31st Jan., 1882.

52b. Lady Margaret Hall (founded 1879) with its Hostel and St. Hugh Hall (founded 1866) for ladies, are situated in Norham Gardens, branching from this road.

Still further southward, on the W. side of the same road, is a red brick house in the style known as "Queen Anne," built in 1879 for the 52c. High School for Girls. Mr. T. G. Jackson, architect.

Returning to the Woodstock-road (after our short detour to 52a,b,c), we find on the south side of the Observatory (50) grounds, the 53. Radcliffe Infirmary, opened in 1770. This institution has probably been productive of more truly beneficent results than any other of the foundations of Dr. Radcliffe (see Nos. 18, 21, 50).

Of late years many considerable additions and improvements have been made in the buildings and arrangements. It is mainly supported by subscriptions, donations, and collections at churches and chapels; from the latter source the income has been augmented by the establishment in 1873 of a special Hospital Sunday Fund. Plans for greatly needed enlargement are now being carried out by a special fund. The elegant Chapel on the N. side of the grounds was built in 1864 at the cost of the late Mr. T. Combe, of the University Press (48). A little to the S. of the Infirmary is the entrance to 53a. Somerville College for ladies, opened 1879, enlarged 1881. In 1886-7 a large block of buildings was erected to the west of the older house, from designs by Mr. H. Wilkinson Moore. On Oct. 20th, 1894, extensive new buildings were opened, when the institution, hitherto known as Somerville Hall, publicly assumed the title and dignity of a "College."

53b. St. Aloysius' (Roman Catholic) Church and Presbytery.

The Church was opened in 1875 by the late Cardinal Manning. It is a lofty and well-proportioned building in the Early English style, with apsidal sanctuary at its W. end, richly adorned with a Rereaos comprising some fifty figures of saints in canopied niches. The splendid high altar was presented by the Marquis of Bute; and a beautifully carved stone pulpit was added by subscription in 1888. On the other side of the road stands

54. St. Giles' Church, rebuilt in the 13th century. The windows of the tower present an unusual and interesting example of early "plate tracery," a small lancet being pierced above two others under a pointed arch. About the year 1120 there was a church on this spot dedicated to St. Giles, who was regarded as the patron saint of churches so situated beyond the gates of towns. The vicarage was instituted by Hugh, Bp. of Lincoln, in 1200: the living being vested in the nunnery of Godstow, near Oxford. It was subsequently purchased by Sir Thomas White, founder of St. John's College (55), to which the living still belongs.

N. of the Church a Parochial Room has recently been built from designs in the Tudor style by Messrs. Wilkinson and Moore.

At St. Giles' Church the two roads unite, and form the broad thoroughfare of St. Giles'-street, one of the finest approaches to the city. The trees on either side, though sadly injured by severe gales, still convey the impression rather of a continental boulevard than the street of an English town; while the general effect is heightened by the assemblage of public buildings at the S. extremity, conspicuous among which is the Martyrs' Memorial (58).

Leaving St. Giles' Church and proceeding S. we may notice on our right the premises No. 61, St. Giles'-street, now occupied by the Pusey Memorial House, opened in 1884 by the late Bp. Mackarness. The institution comprises a Theological Library, of which the collection of the late Dr. Pusey forms the nucleus.

The object of its promoters was to secure by trust an institution manned by a body of clergy who would devote themselves to the study and teaching of theology, so that dogmatic teaching may be perpetuated in a place which must always be a centre of intellectual and moral life. On the upper storey is a Chapel, decorated by Mr. C. E. Kemp: and in the grounds has recently been erected a temporary structure of corrugated iron, called "The Chapel of the Resurrection."

On our left, half-hidden behind the elms on its terrace walk, is

55. St. John's College. This venerable building was originally a house of Bernardine monks (a branch of the Cistercian order), made over by them to Archbp. Chichele (see 19), and by him converted into St. Bernard's College in 1436. The N., S., and W. sides of the first quadrangle are portions of this ancient foundation. The dormer windows, however, were added cir. 1662. The N. portion of the old front (known as Cook's Buildings) was built in 1613, and enlarged in 1638. The modern extension further N. was added in 1880-1.

At the dissolution of monasteries, Henry VIII. presented the house to Christ Church. The latter society conveyed it in 1555 to Sir Thomas White, a native of Rickmansworth, knight and alderman of the city of London, by whom, under a licence granted by King Philip and Queen Mary, it was devoted as a College for the study of Sacred Theology, Philosophy, and Good Arts, to the praise and honour of God, the Virgin Mary, and St. John the Baptist. White was a clothier, and a benefactor of Merchant Taylors' School, whence many of the scholars of St. John's are elected.

Entering the hoary gateway, under the old statue of St. Bernard, we find ourselves in the First or original Quadrangle. On our left is the Hall, the ancient refectory of St. Bernard's, built in 1502, but completely metamorphosed in the Georgian period. It contains portraits of ARMS OF ST. JOHN'S. the Founder, Abps. Laud and Juxon, Sir Walter Raleigh, King George III., &c. Over the fireplace is a singular picture of St. John Baptist, stained in scagliola by Lambert Gorius. The vaulted cellars (15th cent.) entered from the Buttery, opposite the Hall door, will repay inspection. Close by is the Kitchen, which with its upper storeys was built in 1615. East of the Hall is the Chapel, consecrated in 1530, altered at the Restoration, restored 1843-4, and re-decorated in 1872-3. In 1891 a Reredos was added, and the East window refilled with stained glass by Mr.

GARDEN FRONT, ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

C. E. Kemp. Among its quaint effigies may be observed the figures of Sir Thomas White, the founder, and Abp. Laud, who lie buried, with Abp. Juxon, beneath the communion table. At the N.E. corner is a beautiful little Mortuary Chapel, built in 1662 by Dr. Baylie to receive the remains of his son. The Common Room, N.E. of the Chapel, was built in 1676, and contains a remarkable ceiling of Italian "shell-work."

The President's Lodgings (1597, enlarged 1631-6) contain old tapestry, oak fittings, and portraits of Charles I., Mary Queen of Scots, &c.

Through a passage with elegant vaulted ceiling we reach the Second Quadrangle, completed about 1635 by Abp. Laud (see 20), then President of St. John's.

We cannot fail to admire the picturesque effect of the colonnades or piazzas designed in the style of the Renaissance, probably by Inigo Jones. The bronze statues of King Charles I. and his Queen Henrietta Maria, by Hubert le Sueur, are also worthy of notice.

The S. and E. sides of this court are occupied by the Library, the E. wing of which was added by Laud.

The Library consists of two fine rooms, and besides a good collection of books contains a curious portrait of Charles I., with the whole Book of Psalms written in the lines of the face; and some interesting relics of Abp. Laud, such as the cap worn by him at his execution, his walking-stick, diaries, &c. Among the treasures are also some ancient vestments and ecclesiastical furniture, a copy of Caxton's Chaucer, and of the First Prayer Book of Edward VI. On the 30th

WINDOW IN GARDEN FRONT,
ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

August, 1639, when Laud was Chancellor of the University, King Charles and his Queen were royally entertained in the newly opened Library.

Leaving this quad. by a passage with fan-traceried roof and quaintly carved doors, we enter through an iron gate the beautiful Gardens, open free to the public. The extremely picturesque E. or Garden Front of the Library (see p. 88) affords many a charming subject for the artist's pencil.

The Gardens occupy about five acres, and exhibit the results of centuries of careful cultivation. They have always been a favourite resort of visitors, who are much impressed with the scene of quiet loveliness which opens on the view in this delightful retreat, only a few steps from the thoroughfare of St. Giles', and in the very heart of the city. An open air Masonic fête in these gardens is usually one of the most attractive features of Commemoration week.

Amongst the worthies of St. John's, besides the three founders, as they may be called (Chichele, White, and Laud), may be mentioned Abp. Juxon, Laud's successor for a time in the restored primacy, Abraham Tucker the metaphysician, Shirley the dramatist, and Wheatly the divine.

Nearly opposite the S. end of St. John's front is 56 (i). The Taylor Institution, occupying the East wing of a grand pile in the Ionic order, the central portion and West wing of which are known as the University Galleries (see next page).

This institution was founded and endowed by Sir Robert Taylor, an eminent architect and alderman of London, who died in 1792, leaving by will a considerable sum for the erecting of a proper edifice, and for establishing a foundation "for the teaching and improving the European languages." The building, erected 1845-8 from an admirable design by Cockerell, is entered from St. Giles' between columns surmounted by allegorical figures of France, Italy, Germany, and Spain. It comprises a spacious Library of foreign literature, with Reading Rooms, open free from 11 to 5 to members of the University, and to others duly recommended; besides Lecture-rooms, and Librarian's apartments. The Taylorian Professorship of Modern European Languages has been superseded by a University Professorship of Comparative Philology, held by the distinguished Max Müller; and connected with this institution are Teachers of the French, German, Italian, and Spanish languages, and certain scholarships for open competition annually. The Hechester Fund for the encouragement of the study of the Slavonic languages and literature is also administered by the Taylorian Curators.

56 (ii). Ashmolean Museum and University Galleries, entered by the grand portico in Beaumont-street, opposite the Randolph Hotel (57). Open to the public from 12 till 4 daily (fee 3*d.*; free on Thursdays and Saturdays from 2 till 4.)* The

THE TAYLOR INSTITUTION.

Galleries were erected partly from the bequest of Dr. Randolph, for the reception of the Poinfret Statues, and for paintings and other curiosities which might from time to time be left to the

* Closed from Aug. 19th till Sept. 16th.

University. Recent extensive enlargements give much additional space for the collections, providing accommodation also for the Professor of Archæology ; while additional buildings on the North side, completed in 1894, afford ample space for the Ashmolean collections, which are now removed from their old home (2) in Broad-street ; and the University may now congratulate itself on possessing under one roof a museum of Art and Archæology unusually varied and complete, which vies with some of the most famous of continental museums.

In the principal Sculpture Gallery on the ground floor and in the basement are now gathered and arranged in order the valuable classic "marbles," hitherto scattered in different repositories and in some cases hidden in obscure and out-of-the-way corners. To the Pomfret Statues (presented by the Dowager Countess of Pomfret in 1755) are now added the Arundel Marbles, consisting of Greek and Roman inscribed tablets, including the celebrated Iarian Chronicle, collected by Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, and presented by his grandson (Henry Howard) in 1677, with others given at various dates by Selden (1654), G. Wheler (1676), Dawkins, Rawlinson, Hyde Clarke, &c. The elegant Candelabra from the baths of Hadrian's Villa at Tivoli, formerly preserved in the Radcliffe (21), occupy a conspicuous position in the principal gallery ; the sepulchral and votive tables at the W. end are of great interest. Most of the models of Sir Francis Chantrey's works, presented by his widow, are in the basement. On the first floor is a Picture Gallery, 100 ft. by 28 ft., admirably lighted, containing an interesting Art Collection, which is frequently receiving additions. Here are displayed some valuable original etchings by Rembrandt, Vandyck, &c., with curious prints by Albert Durer and others from the Douce Collection (Bodleian). There are also some good examples of the early Italian painters, the early and later British schools ; to which are now added (1894) by a munificent bequest of Mrs. Combe, several works by the modern Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood—Millais, Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, &c., with landscapes by David Cox and others. A fire-proof gallery on the same floor contains the famous collection of 190 original sketches by Michel Angelo and Raffuello, purchased for £7,000, the greater part of which was contributed by the Earl of Eldon. There are also a number of choice drawings by J. M. W. Turner, the gift of Mr. Ruskin (first Slide Professor of Art), who also founded, furnished, and endowed the Ruskin Drawing School, which occupies the ground floor of the West Wing, and is enriched by a precious collection of examples and studies generously presented by Mr. Ruskin for the use of students.

The Ashmolean Museum now occupies spacious and well-lighted rooms (erected 1893-4) forming an extension of the Galleries northward. It has its origin in the earliest known collection of curiosities in England, formed by one John Tradescant, who founded at South Lambeth a popular exhibition known as "Tradescant's Ark."*

Tradescant the elder died in 1638, and his son of the same name (who died in 1662) bequeathed the collection to Elias Ashmole, who had resided in his house. The latter added to the original museum his own collection of coins and other objects, with rare books and MSS., the whole of which he presented to the University, by whom the old building in Broad-street (2) was erected for their reception. The natural history collection and anthropological objects have been removed to the New Museum (6); but as an archæological museum the Ashmolean still takes very high rank.

The Ashmolean collections are displayed chiefly in three large rooms on the first floor: devoted to Prehistoric, tian Art, including Mr. Flinders Petrie's recent gifts. The middle room the largest of which is Anglo-Saxon, and Egyptian. The middle room contains Greek vases and

KING ALFRED'S
JEWEL.

THE SWORD

OF HENRY VIII.

terra cottas, including Mr. Myres' specimens from Cyprus; while in another of Renaissance Art, in Fortnum's priceless collection of Majolica ware and other pottery.

Myres' specimens from are displayed the treasures including Mr. C. D. E.

* This "ark," the nucleus of the Museum Tradescantianum, is displayed, with other Tradescant relics, on a landing adjoining one of the rooms on the first floor.

The valuable Ashmolean Library is also on the upper floor. On the ground floor are a number of Casts from the Antique, from Berlin, Vienna, Athens, &c., and some of the Egyptian marbles ; a convenient lecture-room and work-room, and the library of the Oxford Architectural and Historical Society.

An important feature in the Museum is the extensive Anglo-Saxon Collection, containing objects found in several cemeteries of the heathen English, many of them excavated in the neighbourhood of Oxford. Perhaps the most curious and valuable relic is King Alfred's Jewel, discovered in 1693 near his retreat at Athelney. This unique-gem is enamelled in mosaic and set in pure gold delicately wrought. Around the rim is the inscription AELFRED MEC HEHT GEWYRCAN (Alfred ordered me to be made). In the same case is Mr. Bentinck Hawkins' beautiful collection of historic Miniatures. This and another case of specially valuable treasures (old watches, cups, &c.) are ingeniously arranged to wheel into a strong room at closing-time. Another object of interest is the Sword presented to King Henry VIII. by Pope Leo X., with the title "Defender of the Faith." Our illustration represents the handle, curiously set with large crystals in highly wrought silver mountings enriched with niello-work. This sword was a principal object in Ashmole's original collection. Several interesting relics have recently been transferred from the Bodleian (6) ; notably Guy Fawkes' Lantern given to the University in 1641 by Robert Heywood, son of the Justice by whom the conspirator was arrested. Here also may be seen the earliest known example of Egyptian sculpture,—a limestone tablet of the time of King Sent (Sethenes), the second dynasty of the Old Empire,

GUY FAWKES' LANTERN.

B.C. 4700. The inscription is a most interesting specimen of primitive hieroglyphics, and is referred to by Dr. Isaac Taylor in illustration of the origin of the alphabet. Other valuable relics include a remarkable Egyptian Portrait Mummy, and sculptures from Chut-en-Aten's palace cir. B.C. 1500 ; the late Mr. Greville Chester's oriental antiquities and classic engraved gems ; and the late Professor Westwood's unique collection of Fictile Ivories. The new galleries are fitted with the electric light.

57. The Randolph Hotel, erected in 1864, has some architectural pretensions. It is the largest hotel in Oxford, and is much frequented by American visitors. A new Assembly Room and other buildings were added in 1890, and the accommodation is most complete.

THE RANDOLPH HOTEL.

The building on the opposite side of St. Giles' is the West front of Balliol College (60) ; while right before us stands the exceedingly beautiful Memorial Cross so well known as

58. The Martyrs' Memorial, one of the earliest, and justly considered one of the best works of its eminent designer, the late Sir G. G. Scott, R.A. The architect took for his general model the crosses erected by King Edward I. in memory of his Queen Eleanor ; and it may safely be said that not one of these surpassed the Martyrs' Memorial in beauty of design or symmetry of proportions. On the N. face of the base, the following inscription tells in brief the purpose of the structure :—

"To the Glory of God, and in grateful commemoration of His servants, Thomas Cranmer, Nicholas Ridley, Hugh Latimer, Prelates of the Church of England, who, near this spot, yielded their bodies to be burned ; bearing witness to the sacred truths which they had affirmed and maintained against the errors of the Church of Rome ; and rejoicing that to them it was given not only to believe in Christ, but also to suffer for His sake ; This monument was erected by public subscription in the year of our Lord God, MDCCCLXI."

The statues of the three martyrs (by H. Weekes) are strikingly characteristic. Cranmer, facing N., is represented holding his Bible of the greater volume, marked on its cover, " May, 1541 : " this being the first year of the circulation of the Bible by royal authority, for which the Archbishop had long and earnestly pleaded. The attitude of Ridley's statue (E.) fitly represents the steadfastness with which he fought the good fight of faith, and witnessed a good confession. Facing W., his arms crossed meekly over his breast, Latimer appears stooping under the burden of fourscore years, the very image of submission to the will of God and holy resolution to do it.

The first stone of the Memorial was laid by Dr. Plumtre, then Master of University College, on the 19th of May, 1841, when the Tractarian or Anglo-Catholic movement was in its early vigour ; and the originators of the proposal to erect in Oxford a memorial to the " Protestant martyrs " met with much opposition. The work was nevertheless carried to completion, and it has now stood for half a century, at once a protest against Romish domination and a witness to the growth of that party in the Church who during this period have been zealously labouring to revive and popularize tenets and practices against which the martyrs protested unto death. (See pages 2, 8, 44.)

59. St. Mary Magdalene Church, adjoining, is also associated with the martyrs, its North Aisle having been rebuilt in the year 1841 as a part of the memorial. Emblems of the martyrs are used in its architectural embellishments ; and in the interior is preserved the door of the cell in Bocardo* in which they were confined. The S. aisle was probably completed in the reign of Edward II. Its beautiful open parapet, niched and canopied buttresses, and decorated windows, were carefully restored some years since.

1895.]

THE MARTYRS' MEMORIAL AND BALLIOL COLLEGE.

H

The tower was rebuilt in 1511-31, of materials brought, it is said, from Rewley

Abbey; it was carefully restored in 1890-1 by Mr. H. W. Moore; on the W. side is a figure of the patron saint. The fine peal of six bells were re-cast at the expense of the late Mr. Cavell.

We have now returned to our original starting-point (see page 1); but there remain several objects of much interest which must be seen before the visitor can be said to have completed his tour through the city. So we turn once more into Broad-street, and find on our left hand

MASTER'S HOUSE, BALLIOL.

60. Balliol College, the front of which extends westward to the end of Broad-street, and northward to St. Giles's beyond the Martyrs' Memorial (58). The South or principal front was built in 1867-9 on the site of the old buildings, from designs by Waterhouse, at the expense of Miss Brakenbury, a munificent benefactor, who also endowed eight scholarships. W. of the new front is the Master's Lodging (shown on the left of the view above); the plain classic portion further westward, called Fisher's Buildings, was erected in 1769 and refaced in

* See pages 1, 2, and 110; also the Appendix.

BALLIOL COLLEGE, SOUTH FRONT.

FROM THE ENGLISH ILLUSTRATED."

1876; the portion E. of Magdalene Church was built in 1825, and the more northern front, facing the Martyrs' Memorial (see p. 97) was added 1852-3.

Balliol College was founded between 1263 and 1268, by Sir John de Balliol, father of the Scottish king of that name. At his death his plans were carried out by his widow Devorgulla or Dervorguilla, of Galloway, whose original statutes, dated 1282, are still preserved. Balliol thus disputes precedence with Merton (26) as a collegiate foundation, although many years prior to its establishment students had been wont to assemble in Oxford, lodging either in private houses or in inns or halls, usually under the supervision of a Master of Arts.

THE OLD HALL AND LIBRARY, BALLIOL.

Entering the First Quadrangle under the lofty tower, we have before us on the N. side the Library (built 1430-80, refitted by Wyatt in 1722), containing many early editions of the Bible, with some beautiful illuminated manuscripts.

Some precious relics of Browning are here deposited, including several volumes of original MSS. of his poems, and the "old yellow book" which suggested the plot of "The Ring and the Book."

Adjoining this on the E. is the Chapel, rebuilt 1856-7 from Mr. Butterfield's designs. Its E. window, reredos of Derbyshire alabaster, and screen of iron and stone, are much admired. In its windows some original stained glass of the 14th century is preserved, as well as later Flemish designs by Van Ling. On the W. side of the quadrangle is the old Dining Hall, built about 1432, and now fitted up as a Reading room for members of the college.

Some of its windows contain interesting fragments of stained glass, dated 1533: the two at the N. end, illustrative of the great poets, were placed in memory of the late Professor of Poetry (J. C. Shairp). This room and the old Library are shown in the view on page 99.

ARMS OF BALLIOL COLL.

A passage to the left leads to an open space with smooth green lawns, shaded with chestnuts and elms. On its N. side is the lofty Dining Hall, opened in 1877: Waterhouse, architect (see p. 101). It is entered by a flight of steps, the doorway being surmounted by an ornamented gable with open tracery. On the ground-floor are the Buttery, Common room, and Laboratory, as well as the Kitchen, which communicates by lifts with the Dining Hall above.

On entering the Hall, beneath the organ-gallery, we notice just inside the door an interesting portrait (a copy of the original Lutterworth) of John Wycliffe, the early Reformer (see 14, 20, 20), who was a Fellow of this college, and became Master about 1300. The first translation of the Bible into English was made in 1380 by Wycliffe while Master of Balliol; and in this connection it is noteworthy that the first reduction in the price of printing the Bible was made in 1841 by the Queen's printer, Mr. W. Spottiswoode, a fellow of this college; and the first penny edition of the New Testament was issued in 1880 by Mr. B. West, bookbinder, one of its tenants. At the further end of the room, high up on the wall, are a pair of old paintings of the Founder and his wife; below them are several fine portraits of eminent members of the college, conspicuous among which are the late Archbp. Tait, Cardinal Manning, Robert Browning the poet, and the late distinguished Master, Dr. Jowett, who, among other generous benefactions provided the fine organ for this room, at a cost of over £1,000; while among living celebrities are Viscount Peel, late Speaker of the House of Commons, clad, like Browning, in his D.C.L. robe.

THE DINING HALL, BALLIOL COLLEGE.

On leaving the Hall, before descending the steps, we pause under the archway to admire the view of the Chapel, Library, &c.

Balliol, comparatively obscure until modern times, is now highly distinguished for the intellectual attainments of its members, of whom it usually furnishes a large quota to the class lists. The matriculation examination, which has to be passed by candidates for admission, is unusually "stiff," and it is understood that students at Balliol shall be contented with nothing short of "honours" at the University examinations. One cause of this high standard is to be found in the system of "open scholarships" instituted here by Dr. Jenkyns, who presided over this college for thirty-five years. Of the numerous "exhibitions" offered at Balliol, fourteen were founded by Mr. Snell, a native of Ayrshire, for the benefit of students from the University of Glasgow. Other benefactions for Scottish students were left by Bp. Warner. Among the celebrated Scotsmen who have been thus introduced into a career of eminence, may be mentioned Dr. Adam Smith, Lockhart, Sir William Hamilton, Dr. Baillie the physician, Inglis the lawyer, Lord Moncrieff, and Dr. Tait, the late primate of all England. Humphrey Duke of Gloucester (see 6, 19), and Tunstall, Bp. of London and Durham; the gentle Evelyn, Kyrle, the "man of Ross" immortalized by Pope, and Southey the poet, are among the distinguished Balliol men of the past: the names of T. H. Green, R. L. Nettleship, and Benjamin Jowett (who died Oct. 1, 1893), departed worthies of our own day, will long be remembered.

CHAPEL AND LIBRARY, BALLIOL COLLEGE.

ARMS OF TRINITY COLL.

Adjoining Balliol College on the E. is
61. Trinity College, conspicuous by its gates of ironwork, now supported by massive stone piers,
—a copy of those in Parks-road, opposite Wadham (8), represented on the next page.

Looking through these gates, adorned with the arms of the Earl of Guildford and the founder, the visitor will be delighted with the sweet beauty of the New Quadrangle, the buildings of which were completed in 1887 from the extremely picturesque designs of

THE PRESIDENT'S HOUSE, &c., TRINITY COLLEGE.

Mr. T. G. Jackson. On the East side is a fine range of rooms for students, and on the N., adjoining the Chapel, a new house for the President. The whole forms a noteworthy contribution to the architectural beauties of Oxford; the gables being specially admirable, and the decorative carving (by Farmer and Brindley) exhibiting much freshness and variety. The spacious lawn, with fruit trees full of blossom in the early summer, gives peculiar charm to the scene.

The college was founded in 1554, and dedicated to "the Holy and Undivided Trinity," by Sir Thomas Pope, of Tittenhanger, Herts, privy councillor to King Henry VIII. and Queen Mary, and a special friend of Sir Thomas More ; on the site of an ancient house of Benedictines called Durham College, founded c. 1286 by Prior Richard de Hoghton and the monks of the Cathedral Convent of Durham, and suppressed at the dissolution of monasteries.

The Chapel, facing us, is open free in summer term from 9 to 6. It is a well-proportioned building, completed in 1694 by Dr. Bathurst, President of the college ; and its screen and altar-piece exhibit some beautiful wood-carving by Grinling Gibbons.

On the N. side is a fine tomb with recumbent effigies in alabaster of the Founder and his third wife. The painted ceiling, subject, "The Ascension," is by Peter Berchet. In 1885 the windows were filled with stained glass at the cost of the present President, Rev. H. G. Woods, then Bursar.

On the E. side of the Second Quadrangle is the original Library of Durham College, founded by Richard de Bury, Bishop of that see, who died in 1343. Its windows contain some curious old glass. Opposite is the Hall, rebuilt 1618-20. A statue of the founder may be seen over the door, and his portrait, with that of his third wife Lady Elizabeth Paulet, Abp. Sheldon, Warton the poet (who has left an interesting memoir of the founder), and other worthies, adorn the walls. The Third Quadrangle, entered under the bell-staircase, was designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and built 1667-1682 ; S. wing altered 1728. Its E. side is open to the Garden, which, with its charming avenue the "Time Walk," its broad grass plots and ancient yews, affords quiet rest and grateful shade. Through the gates at its

EAST GATE OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

E. end may be seen the front of Wadham College (8). Leaving the Garden by the new gateway, we find ourselves again in the first quadrangle.

At Trinity College is preserved an antique chalice of silver gilt, beautifully engraved, with gold paten, originally belonging to St. Alban's Abbey, but presented to this college by its founder. Among Trinity worthies may be named Alp. Sheldon (see page 6), Seth Ward, Gellibrand the mathematician, Ludlow and Ireton the Republicans, Warton, and the celebrated third Earl of Shaftesbury, author of "Characteristics." In 1878, the late Cardinal Newman was elected an honorary Fellow of this college, of which he was a member in his undergraduate days.

Almost adjoining the gates is the picturesque old academic hall, now a private residence, but still known as Kettel Hall, so named after a certain Dr. Kettel, by whom it was founded, 1615, on the site of an older house known as Perilous Hall, after Dr. Perles, its founder. Opposite stands the N. front of

ARMS OF EXETER COLL.

62. Exeter College, which we enter from "The Turl," formerly a narrow opening through the city wall into the High-street.

It derives its name from its foundation, in 1314, by Walter de Stapledon, Bishop of Exeter, whose design was frustrated by his untimely death. It was, however, incorporated by charter of Queen Elizabeth in 1565, when Sir W. Petre contributed munificently towards a second endowment. The W. front, by which we enter, is 220 feet in length; its gateway was rebuilt in 1595, 1703, and 1834, at which latter date the whole front was newly faced.

Entering the large Quadrangle, the first object which strikes the visitor is the magnificent Chapel on the N. side, built 1856-9.

The Chapel is open free in term-time daily from 1 to 4 p.m. This masterpiece of the late Sir G. G. Scott reminds us of the Sainte Chapelle in Paris, or of the choir of Lichfield Cathedral, to both of which it bears considerable resemblance. The doorway has on either side statues of Bp. Stapledon and Sir W. Petre; the sculpture in its tympanum represents Our Lord giving the charge to St. Peter. In niches surmounting the buttresses are figures of the twelve apostles. Inside, the richly sculptured and inlaid screen, stained glass windows, elegant clustered columns with carved capitals, lofty groined roof, choice wood-carving, and the harmonious effect of the E. end, with steps of Devonshire marble and exquisite mosaics by Salviati, combine to form a beautiful reproduction of the Early Decorated period of Gothic architecture. Canopied stalls in carved oak from designs by Mr. Bodley, R.A., were added in 1884. This fine work, extending nearly the whole length of the chapel on either side, greatly enhances the rich effect of the interior ; but its style is somewhat more rigid and conventional than that adopted by the late Sir G. G. Scott in the other decorative work. On 12th May, 1890, the decoration was completed by the placing on the S. wall of a magnificent piece of Tapestry designed by Sir E. Burne-Jones, Hon. D.C.L., A.R.A., and executed by Mr. Wm. Morris, M.A., both Honorary Fellows of this college. The subject, "The Adoration of the Magi," is treated with great originality. Into the presence of the Holy Mother and Child the three strange visitants are entering with costly gifts. Between them and the Holy Babe is an Angel holding the mystic star which has guided them to the Infant's feet. The figures are life-size, and the admirable expression of their faces, the marvellous intricacy and beauty of their apparel, with the richness and variety of colour throughout, combine to form a piece of work unequalled in modern times.

N.E. of the Chapel are the new buildings (1855-7) fronting Broad-street.

Facing the Chapel, on the South side of the quad., is the Hall, built by Sir John Acland in 1618. With its fine timber roof and perpendicular windows it affords a good example of a college hall.

In the Hall are portraits of the Founder ; Sir William Petre and Charles I., benefactors ; Abps. Secker and Marsh, Bps. Bull, Conybeare, Hall, and Prideaux ; Lord Chancellor Shaftesbury 1672, Sir J. F. Coleridge, Dr. Kennicott the Hebrew scholar, and other eminent members. Besides these worthies, Samuel the father of the Wesleys, Lord Coleridge, the late Bishop of Oxford (Dr. Mackarness), and the late Prof. Froude, are among the best-known members of Exeter College.

The Fellows' Garden, small but exceedingly beautiful, is entered through a doorway at the S.E. angle of the quadrangle.

On its N. side is the Library (rich in mathematical works), built in 1856 from a tasteful design by Sir G. G. Scott ; and from its pleasant greensward we get a charming view of the Divinity School (3) and Duke Humphrey's Library (6), their mullioned windows and picturesque buttresses and pinnacles richly clothed with foliage ; while on the other side the spire of St. Mary's (20) and the dome of the Radcliffe (21), with the great chestnut tree mentioned on page 50, complete a lovely and reposeful picture. On returning to the quadrangle we notice a fine fig-tree (known as "Dr. Kennicott's fig-tree") which in summertime covers the garden front of the college with its broad leaves.

On the opposite side of Turl-street extends the E. front of 63. Jesus College, remarkable as the first college founded since the Reformation, its charter bearing date 27th June, 1571.

It was designed as a place of education for Welsh students by Dr. Hugh Ap Rice (or Price), who died in 1564. Queen Elizabeth, to whom Price applied for sanction, granted timber from the royal forests of Stow and Shotover, also the land on which part of the college stands, formerly occupied by ancient halls ; and thereupon assumed the title of founder. Sir Eubule Thelwall, Principal of the college in 1621, doubled its resources, procured a new charter and statutes, and added to the buildings. The celebrated Sir Leoline Jenkins, a native of Glamorganshire, who became Principal in 1661, was also a munificent benefactor.

THE LIBRARY, EXETER COLLEGE.

B. H. BLACKWELL.

The East front of this college was entirely remodelled and a handsome Gateway Tower added in 1856, from the excellent designs of the late Mr. Buckler, who also restored the S. side. On the right of the First Quadrangle as we enter, we notice the Chapel, an unusually good specimen of very late Gothic, having been consecrated in 1621 and enlarged in 1636 ; the E. window is of the latter date. The interior of the Chapel was well restored by Mr. Street in 1864. Over its entrance is the suitable inscription, "Ascendat oratio, descendat gratia." The Hall was one of the gifts of Sir Eubule Thelwall, and, as usual, is adorned with portraits of founders and benefactors—among them Queen Elizabeth, Charles I. by Vandyck, and Charles II. by Sir Peter Lely. The Library was built 1667 by Sir Leoline Jenkins. It contains many scarce books and MSS. ; among the latter those of Lord Herbert of Chelmsbury. The curious Llyfr Coch or Red Book, containing a mass of Welsh legendary lore, romances of King Arthur, &c., of the fourteenth century, has been transferred to the Bodleian Library (6).

Many eminent Welshmen have been educated here : among these worthies were James Howell, who while imprisoned by the Parliamentarians wrote his interesting Epistole Hoeliane ; and Sir Thomas Herbert, the traveller, who accompanied Charles I. to the scaffold and published an account of the closing scenes of that ill-fated monarch's life.

Facing Jesus College, and separated from Exeter College by Brasenose lane, is

64. Lincoln College, named after its founder, Richard

Fleming, Bp. of Lincoln, 1427 ; by whose successor, Bp. Rotherham, it was reconstituted in 1478, the statutes being dated 1479. Entering the First Quadrangle by the gateway under a groined roof, we notice opposite, on the E. side, the Hall, built in 1437.

ARMS OF LINCOLN.

The Hall was modernized in 1701, when the fine tracery of the windows was destroyed and the oak roof concealed by a plaster ceiling, in accordance with the prevalent "classic" taste ; but in 1891 it was happily restored to its original form under the direction of Mr. T. G. Jackson. On its walls are portraits of the founders, Lord Crewe, a principal benefactor, and others. The Library is on the N. side of this quad., and the Rector's lodgings on the S. Notice the curious device carved on the walls—(T. beacon-tun)—a rebus on the name of Bp. Thos. Beckington, by whom this portion was built. But the oldest part of the college is its Kitchen, reached through an archway past the Hall door. It occupies the site of Deep Hall, the only tenement acquired during the life-time of the founder. Its walls, of extraordinary thickness, are evidently of great antiquity; and recent restorations have brought to light its fine high-pitched open-timber roof.

The Chapel, on the S. side of the South Quadrangle, was consecrated in 1631. It was built by Dr. Williams, a later Bishop of Lincoln (1621-1642), and Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal,—the last ecclesiastic by whom the office was held.

This Chapel is an extremely interesting example of 17th century work in Oxford. Built on the mediæval plan, with fairly pure Perpendicular or Tudor details, it was fitted up throughout with oak and cedar in the style of the Renaissance, and fortunately remains to us un—"restored." The carved figures at the stall-ends are specially worthy of notice; and the windows exhibit some very choice painted glass, of Dutch or Flemish origin, brought from Italy 1629. On the N. side are effigies of the prophets, on the S. the twelve apostles. The subjects of the E. window (the types and antitypes of Scripture) are painted with remarkable attention to detail and perspective, and will repay careful examination. In the ante-chapel is preserved the Pulpit from which John Wesley preached when a resident Fellow of Lincoln.

There is a story told about the Vine which covered the walls of this quadrangle. At the founder's death his plans were left unfulfilled; and on the occasion of a visit from his successor, Bp. Rotherham, the Rector preached from Ps. lxxx. 14, "Behold, and visit this vine;" enlarging on the needy state of the college. The appeal so touched the bishop's heart, that his munificent endowment was the result; and in gratitude for this circumstance, the vine is held in veneration.

Bp. Flemyng, who had been himself a Wycliffite, founded this college to oppose the new doctrines. A MS. copy of Wycliffe's Bible (in the Bodleian) is now a cherished possession of the college; while some of its most interesting associations are connected with the leader of another great Oxford movement, John Wesley, whose portrait may be seen in his rooms (the scene of the meetings of the so-called "Holy Club") which are still shown to visitors.

Some new buildings, designed by Mr. T. G. Jackson, have lately been erected in the rear of the college. The Fellows' Garden lies S. of the chapel.

Crossing the road and walking southward, we catch some pleasing glimpses of the Radcliffe Camera (21) and St. Mary's spire (20) on our left, and re-enter the High-street beneath the tower of 65. All Saints' Church, built in 1708, after a design by Dean Aldrich, in the revived classic style then in favour.*

The church, though modern, has an ancient history, having had an existence as "All Hallows" prior to 1122, when it was presented to the abbey of St. Frideswide (see 29) by Henry I. Edward II. having granted it to the Bishops of Lincoln, it was settled upon Lincoln College (64) by the founder, Bp. Flemyng. In 1699 the old church was destroyed by the fall of the spire, and the present building occupies its site. The church has until recently presented an appearance of venerable antiquity, in consequence of the perishable nature of the stone used in its construction. The tower and S. front have now, however, undergone complete and careful renovation under the superintendence of Mr. H. W. Moore, architect (1889-90). The interior (restored in 1865) is lofty and handsome; and the tower and spire, although inconsistent with classic models, are particularly elegant. The latter, having been taken down as unsafe, was rebuilt in 1874. In the church is a fine tomb with the recumbent effigy of a certain worthy Alderman Levins, five times Mayor of Oxford, whose virtues are set forth in a quaint epitaph.

Opposite All Saints' are the premises built in 1866 for the Oxford branch of the London and County Bank; at the rear of which is the Gymnasium, erected for the late Mr. Maclaren in 1858. Next to the tower of All Saints' church stands the well-known Mitre Hotel, on the site of Burwaldscote Hall, one of the academic houses with which in the middle ages this vicinity abounded. Another extinct Hall or Inn, identified as Elden Hall, has been brought to light during recent alterations to the S. front of the spacious Markets for meat, poultry, fish, vegetables, &c. The fine oak-panelled staircase of the hall has been restored and utilised by the proprietors of the business premises occupying this frontage. On the other side a blue lamp indicates the Police Station, another old academic house, formerly known as Kemp Hall.

Arrived once more at Carfax (X, see page 73), we turn our steps northward by Corn-Market-street (once occupied by corn-dealers' sheds). On our left are the handsome premises erected in 1890-1 for the Metropolitan Bank from designs by Mr. H. G. W. Drinkwater. Opposite are the old and well-known hostelries, the Golden Cross and the Roebuck, and on the left is the flower-decked front of the Clarendon, known to former generations as the Star. The passage at its N. end forms the most frequented entrance to the rooms of

*. * The benefice of this Church having been united to that of St. Martin's, Carfax (36), it will in future be known as St. Martin and All Saints'.

Union Society (42), see page 76. A short distance farther northward we observe the venerable tower of 66. St. Michael's Church, one of the few remaining examples of Saxon architecture: its proportions, the "long-and-short work" of its quoins, and the absence of buttresses and staircase, are among the evidences of its early date. The battlements added in the 16th century were taken down in 1873, and replaced by a plain stone coping, and the tower was strengthened, under the direction of Mr. Bruton. The remarkable windows in the tower, each consisting of two semicircular-headed openings divided by a curious baluster, are now replaced as they appeared before the mutilation of the upper tier. The main fabric of the church, restored by Street in 1855, affords some interesting specimens of the architecture of various periods.

It has been said that the tower was built by Robert D'Oyley, constable of Oxford in the time of the Conqueror. There is no documentary evidence in support of the assertion; though he may have repaired an older structure, "for it is," says Mr. Lang, "in the true primitive style—gaunt, unadorned, with round-headed windows, good for shooting from with the bow. St. Michael's was not only a church, but a watch-tower of the city wall; and here the old North Gate, called Bocardo,* spanned the street [see illustration on page 1, and Appendix]. The rooms above the gate were used as a prison, and the poor inmates used to let down a greasy old hat from the window in front of the passers by, and cry, 'Pity the Bocardo birds!' . . . Of Bocardo no trace remains, but St. Michael's is likely to last as long as any edifice in Oxford. . . . It is worth while to climb the tower, and remember the times when arrows were sent like hail from the narrow windows on the foes who approached Oxford from the North, while prayers for their confusion were read in the church below."

Opposite St. Michael's Church, and close to the site of Bocardo, are the printing and publishing offices of "ALDEN'S OXFORD GUIDE," No. 35, Corn-Market-street, where photographic views and other souvenirs of Oxford are kept on sale, and information is at any time gladly afforded to strangers.

The Railway Stations may be reached from this point

* Mr. Boase suggested that the prison may have been so named sarcastically, from the form of syllogism called Bocardo, out of which the reasoner could not "bring himself back into his first figure" without the use of special processes.—Oxford (Historic Towns) either by George-street or New-Inn-Hall-street. If we take the latter route into the New Road (see page 74), we shall pass the

67. Probate Court of the diocese, erected in 1864 ; and the

68. County Hall, built in 1841, consisting of two commodious Assize and Sessions Courts, in one of which the County Courts are held monthly, and a spacious Hall. The Oxfordshire County Council also hold their meetings here. To the rear is

69. H. M. Prison, a massive pile of buildings, in which are included the remains of Oxford Castle.

As we walk down the New Road towards the Railway Stations we notice on our left a tree-covered mound, and perhaps catch a glimpse of a grey old tower behind it. The former was an ancient fortress of the West Mercians, probably thrown up about A.D. 900 ; near its summit a flight of steps leads to a vaulted well-chamber (temp. Henry III.) ; and the latter had frowned in its gloomy grandeur for many a year, even at the early date when D'Oyly incorporated it with his newer structure and made it serve as a campanile to the church of St. George, used by the house of secular canons within the walls.* The Crypt is of considerable antiquarian interest. The Castle at Oxford was famous from D'Oyly's time to the Civil Wars ; but after its surrender in 1646, it lost much of its strength and importance, and gradually fell into ruin. Perhaps the most remarkable of its incidents is that which relates to the Empress Maud, who being besieged there by the army of King Stephen, contrived to escape across the frozen river accompanied by three trusty knights, all clad in ghostly white, passing the sentinels unobserved.

At the foot of the mound is the

70. County Police Station. A lane on the left, past St. Peter-le-Bailey School, leads by the Castle tower to the Church of

71. St. Thomas-the-Martyr, founded in the reign of Stephen, but in large part rebuilt during subsequent periods. A north aisle was erected in 1847, and a new Vicarage in 1893-4.

Beyond the railway, westward, is Osney Cemetery, partly on the site of the burial ground of Osney Abbeiy (see page 66) : and still farther past the Railway Stations are the populous suburbs of Osney Town and New Botley, with St. Frideswide's Church, erected in 1872.

* See illustration in the Appendix to our Shilling edition.

We can but just name the following, which, lying outside our line of route, have not yet been visited :—

72. St. Ebbe's Church, of immemorial origin, rebuilt 1814-16, and enlarged and improved in 1866. A fine Norman doorway of the 12th century is preserved on the S. side. On the other side of Church street is the City Technical School, fully equipped for teaching under the management of a Committee appointed by the City Council ; architect, Mr. H. W. Moore, 1893. Farther south is

73. Commercial Road Chapel, built in 1832 for the Rev. H. Bulteel, on his secession from the Established Church ; and now occupied by a congregation of Baptists. New School-rooms have been added. In the district known as "The Friars" is situated

74. Holy Trinity Church, opened in 1845, as a Chapel of Ease to the large and populous parish of St. Ebbe ; it was thoroughly renovated in 1893.

75. Mansfield College is situated W. of Mansfield-road, a new thoroughfare running S. from South Parks-road, and connecting with Holywell-street. Its position, and the best means of approach, are clearly shown on our Plan. It was founded here in October, 1886, by the Trustees and Council of Spring Hill College, Birmingham, who resolved to transfer the college to Oxford, giving it the name of the family by whom it was originally endowed. It has been erected by the Congregational Churches for the study of theology, primarily with a view to the education of their own ministry, and also as a centre of evangelical teaching and influence for all members of the University. It is not a college in the ordinary Oxford sense of the word, as its students are only men who have already graduated. Its professorial and tutorial staff are limited to the province of theology, and its chapel pulpit is open to representative preachers of Evangelical churches of all denominations. The memorable opening ceremonies took place on October 14th, 15th, and 16th, 1889.

Mansfield College is built from designs by Mr. Basil Champneys, in the early 14th cent. style of Gothic. Its buildings are arranged as an open or incomplete quadrangle; the Chapel forming the E., the Library with the Principal's house, the W., while the N. comprises the Hall, Common Room, and lecture-rooms, &c., the Entrance Gateway in the middle being surmounted by a square tower with oriel window, and an embattled turret at its S.E. angle, its parapet being plain, reminding one of Beaufort's tower at St. Cross. The Chapel is lofty with narrow aisles and an open wagon-roof, supported by stone arches, between which are statues of eminent divines in canopied niches. The oak carving of the screen and of the canopied stalls is specially noticeable; the windows at the north and south end are filled with stained glass at the cost of various benefactors; and the oak canopy of the pulpit is a gift of Mr. Clarke of the Christian World. The Porch is represented in our engraving, reduced by permission from a drawing in the British Architect. Over the doorway is a figure of Origen, while statues of Augustine and Athanasius are in the niches on the right and left. The fine organ (presented by Mr. W. H. Wills of Bristol) was publicly opened on the 20th May, 1890. The Library and Dining Hall are well designed, the projecting windows of the former, and the bold semi-circular oriel which lights the high table of the latter, being specially noticeable; the oak carving and other details of ornament are admirable throughout. The rooms and corridors are now adorned with a series of portraits of Puritan and early Nonconformist divines, presented to the college in 1894. The grounds are laid out with lawns and terrace walks, commanding views of the older college buildings of Oxford.

PORCH OF CHAPEL, MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

76. Manchester College occupies a fine site in Mansfield Road, about midway between the new Mansfield College (75) and the five-century old "New" College of Wykeham (12). The E. front (shown in our illustration) faces Mansfield-road, extending N. to Savile-road. This institution was founded in 1786 at Manchester as the Manchester Academy, and dedicated "to Truth, to Liberty, to Religion" In 1853 it was removed to London; but the Council having ultimately decided to remove their academic institution to this old home of culture and study, the college was formally inaugurated in temporary rooms on the 25th October, 1889. The new buildings form a small quadrangle, with Entrance Tower and Gateway on the E. side, Chapel and Library with Lecture-rooms S. and N., and on the W. the domestic buildings and offices. The Chapel is a lofty and beautiful structure, with richly carved oak stalls, pulpit, and eagle, and a good organ by Gray and Davison. The Library, a fine room 80 ft. by 30 ft. was built and furnished mainly at the cost of Mr. Henry Tate, of London, who contributed £10,000. The memorial stone was laid on Oct. 20th, 1891, and the college was formally opened on October 18th, 1893, the venerable Dr Martineau taking part in the ceremony. The architects were Messrs. Worthington & Son, of Manchester.

Like Mansfield, this College is not intended for the reception of undergraduates, but to afford a theological training to men who have already graduated in the usual way. "The College adheres to its original principle of freely imparting theological knowledge, without insisting on the adoption of particular theological doctrines."

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, E. FRONT.

In taking leave of the visitor, we venture to express the hope that our brief companionship may have been as fruitful in interest and pleasure as it has been our desire to make it. Our theme has been as delightful as it is inexhaustible ; and now that we part company, we can but exclaim, with Nathaniel Hawthorne, "It is a despair to see such a place and ever to leave it ; for it would take a life-time, and more than one, to comprehend and enjoy it satisfactorily."

The Neighbourhood of Oxford abounds with picturesque and interesting spots, offering strong inducements to the visitor to devote a few days to excursions in the surrounding country. Within a short radius there is ample choice of shady lanes, like those at Garsington, or Handborough, or Charlbury ; of historic sites, such as Woodstock and Blenheim, or Abingdon ; of quiet country towns ; and, beyond all, of the Thames that flows through meadows of the richest luxuriance, and is fringed with stately trees and picturesque homesteads, and almost every scene that delights. The description of such attractive spots as these, or of lovely river scenes like Godstow, Iffley, Kennington, or Nuneham, does not come within the scope of the present work. The brief sketch given in the following pages, will, however, afford an idea of some of the interesting incidents of a river-trip to Nuneham ; while for other villages and towns our readers may refer to various handbooks which can be procured at our office. We would specially recommend a handy, chatty, and prettily illustrated shilling handbook to Oxfordshire, by Mr. H. Graves of Balliol College, just published by Messrs. Iliffe & Son.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE LIBRARY.

ALDEN & CO. LTD.

Page 116.

By River to Nuneham.

A REMINISCENCE OF THE OXFORD SUMMER MEETING OF 1890.

[Reprinted from a booklet presented to the University Extension students.]

THE STARTING-PLACE AT FOLLY BRIDGE.

A MORE delightful spot could scarcely have been chosen for the Water Party than Nuneham, the favourite summer resort alike of Oxford residents and visitors. The weather, which had smiled a warm welcome on our "Summer Meeting" guests, remained propitious, though in a cooler and less sunny mood; the river scenery of the Thames wore all its charms, and students returned to their books with nerve and brain all the fresher and stronger for the pleasant "outing."

1895.]

Passing the unique array of College barges on our left (the Oxfordshire side), and the University Boat House on our right (the Berkshire side), we admired the grouping spires and towers, Magdalen, like a fair sentinel, keeping the Eastern entrance ; and noted how greatly the old city has extended itself, the row of houses being almost continuous, until we reached the pretty village of Iffley, terraced on its sloping hill, and crowned with its fine old Norman Church (1135-1147) embowered in leafy verdure. When through the lock, most of us looked out for one of the most picturesque 'bits' of scenery on the river, the famous Iffley Mill ; and almost immediately we had a good view of the grand West front of the church. We now approached Kennington or Rose Island, with its rural inn, the "Swan."

THE RIVER ISIS.

IFFLEY CHURCH, W.

IFFLEY CHURCH, S.

Beyond it lay the village of Littlemore, the buildings of the County Lunatic Asylum forming a conspicuous object. Next we reached Sandford-on-Thames; the pool on our right, before we arrive at the lock, has some sad records of lost lives: a stone obelisk commemorates the death of two Ch. Ch. students, Gaisford and Phillimore, who were drowned while bathing. The quiet old ivy-covered inn contrasts with the busypaper-mill and its roaring wheels. The tall chimney shaft of this mill, by-the-bye, is perceptibly out of the perpendicular, and mimics the 'leaning tower.' St. Peter's College, Radley, is about a mile from Sandford, on the Berkshire side. Soon after leaving Sandford, the wooded slopes of Nuneham Park add new beauty to the landscape. The house occupies a commanding eminence, but it has no architectural merit, being a product of the dullest and most unimaginative period of English art, at least in its architectural aspects. The pretty cottages and bridge now came into sight; and, landing, our time was all too brief to gain a close acquaintance with the charms of park and woods.

Nuneham Courtenay, the ancient seat of the Courtenays, was acquired in 1710 by the first Earl of Harcourt, in the possession of whose family it still remains, its present owner, Aubrey Harcourt, IFFLEY MILL.

Esq., maintaining the traditions of the house in his generous permission for the public enjoyment of his beautiful estate.

A few words about the "Carfax" monument* shall close this brief record. This quaint structure of stone on the brow of the hill which slopes nearly to the water's edge, was erected in 1610 by Otho Nicholson, of Christ Church, on the centre of "Carfax"

COTTAGES AT NUNEHAM.

as a conduit for the supply of water to the University and City from springs on Hincksey Hill (see page 73). Nicholson was treasurer to James I., and he gave the royal monarch a place of honour among the "seven worthies" whose statues adorn the structure, reserving for himself the modest record of his initials,

* See illustration on page 130 of our Shilling Edition.

O.N., woven into the tracery of the parapet. In 1787 the City (then, as now, bent on street-widening) presented the monument to the Earl of Harcourt, who had it rebuilt on the present spot, whence for the past century it has looked proudly down on the distant city which once held its charms so cheap.

NUNEHAM BRIDGE.

NOTE.—In Dr. Murray's New English Dictionary, the etymology of the word "Carfax" is traced, and its meaning defined, as under :—

"Carfax—[M.E. carfuks, -fouk, repr. an earlier carreforc(s), -furcs, corresp. to Pr. carreforc, O.F. carrefor(s), -four (Mod.F. carrefour) :—Lat. quadrifurc-us, four-forked, fr. quadri- = quatuor four + furca fork.

"1. A place where four roads or streets meet.

"2. Hence, the proper name of a place formed by the intersection of two principal streets in various towns, as at Oxford and Exeter."

[Then follow illustrations of various forms of the word in use in the 16th and 17th centuries.]

Many of our readers, we are sure, would welcome an opportunity of enjoying the delightful scenery of the Thames between Oxford and London; and they will thank us for calling their attention to a most pleasant and admirably conducted excursion provided by a service of saloon steamers which leave Folly Bridge (pp. 71, 117) every week-day during the summer months, for a two-days' trip to Kingston-on-Thames, stopping the night at Henley, and passing in their voyage such places as Iffley, Nuneham, Streatley, Pangbourne, Mapledurham, Cliveden, and Windsor, whose very names are fragrant with romantic interest.

STEAMER PASSING IFFLEY MILL.

Postscript.

SINCE the establishment of the Corporation of Oxford on a new basis, under the Local Government Act of 1888, many works of public improvement have been promoted by the City Council. Among other recent changes the main streets and many of the Colleges are now illuminated by electricity, congested districts have been opened up by the making of new roads or the widening of old ones; and the old Town Hall is being superseded by new Municipal Buildings more worthy of this ancient city. The completion of these improvements, and many others, we hope to record in future editions of the GUIDE.

Readers desirous of information on the constitution and regulations of the University or of the Colleges, are referred to the Oxford University Calendar, published annually. The History of Oxford may be studied also in various works on the subject, enumerated in our advertising pages, and obtainable at the Publishing Office of this Guide-Book. Complete lists of the Heads of Colleges and Halls, and the Professors and Officials of the City and County, will be found in Alden's Oxford Almanack, published annually, price one penny, post free 2½d.

For many gratifying letters of appreciation received from friends who have made our acquaintance in these pages during past years, we offer our grateful thanks. Once more we cordially invite communications, and shall be glad to receive any suggestion for the improvement of the Guide in future editions.

27 July, 1895.

E. C. A.

Old Oxford.

ANTIQUARIAN AND HISTORICAL NOTES:

CONTRIBUTED BY THE LATE

MAJOR-GEN. GIBBES RIGAUD, HON. M.A., MAGD. COLL.,

As an Appendix to Alden's Oxford Guide.

BOCARDO FROM THE SOUTH.

ALTHOUGH at the present day it is as a University that Oxford is chiefly held in high esteem, it must be remembered that it had a vast reputation as a city and seat of learning long before the existence of the University.

In Peshall's edition of Antony à Wood it will be found that the antiquary carried back his dates to the 1009th year before Christ (A.M. 2954), when Memphric, king of the Britons, is said to have built the city, whence it had the name of Caer Memphric. The "famous antiquary," as Dugdale calls Ross, says (1468) that the city was first called Membre, or Memphric ;* then Bello-situm (afterwards Beaumont), and then Ridchen, or Ryd-ychen, implying in the Celtic language a Ford of Oxen.

The names of Bellositum, quasi a belle situm, and Beaumont, were given to Oxford for its sweet situation ; and verses in its praise, both in Latin and English, have been written in all ages. Dan Rogers, who was Clerk to the Council to Queen Elizabeth, wrote an epigram in Latin and English, of which the latter version is as follows :—

“He that hath Oxford seen, for beauty, grace,
And healthiness, ne’er saw a better place.
If God Himself on earth abode would make,
He Oxford, sure, would for His dwelling take.”

And Tom Warton, the Poet Laureate, in his Ode for 1751, says :—

“In this princely land of all that’s good and great,
Would Clio seek the most distinguished seat,
Most blest, where all is so sublimely blest,
That with superior grace o’erlooks the rest ?
Like a rich gem, in circling gold enshrined,
Where Isis’ waters wind
Along the sweetest shore
That ever felt fair Culture’s hands,
Or Spring’s embroider’d mantle wore,
Lo ! where majestic Oxford stands.”

It is the nature of its situation which so much enhances the beauty of this city. Placed as it is in a basin, watered by the Isis and Cherwell, with their willows and waterlilies, the ground ascends on all sides except the north, so that, whether we walk by Headington and Shotover, the high ground of Bagley Wood on the Abingdon Road, or to the westward by Cumnor (the home of Amy Robsart), as we gain the summit, or turn and rest at any spot during the ascent, we have Oxford with its spires and towers, and Radcliffe's dome (21) in the centre, all beautifully clustering below us,—a lovely picture.

* This Memphric has left an odious reputation, as having treacherously slain his brother, seized the kingdom, and ruled tyrannically. At length, parted from his company out hunting, he was devoured by wolves, in a dingle near a wood about two miles north of Oxford, at the spot still known as Wolvercote.

To return, however, to our early history. The City had its name Ryd-y-chen during the Britons' rule in this realm, signifying in their language "the Ford of Oxen," so called from the neighbouring ford leading to North Hengesey (now Hincksey), and behind Osney, about a quarter of a mile west of Oxford.* It should be stated, however, that whilst Antony à Wood places the Ford from which the city takes its name at Hincksey, his predecessor Leonard Hutten places it between Iffley and Kennington; whilst some hold the shallows between Port Meadow and Binsey to be the ford by which travellers and herds of cattle passed to and from the west country. But when the Saxons overran the kingdom in A.D. 689, after Cadwallader's death, they formed the name after their plainer and more familiar etymology into "Oxeneford."

The Roman roads in the neighbourhood, so carefully described by the late Professor Hussey, seem to disprove the existence of any considerable town here at the Roman period. The road from the Roman town of Alcester, near Bicester, to the Roman station at Dorchester, passes at about two miles and a half to the east of Oxford, and may be traced near Headington, but has no deviation towards Oxford. We have then the British period, all uncertain ; but we know that the place was destroyed by the Saxons in A.D. 449, when Vortigern thoroughly repaired it, and made it his residence. And in 886 we find it the residence of King Alfred and his three sons, Edward, Athelward, and Alfward. Whilst we claim Alfred the Great as the one who gave life to Oxford as a place of learning, we think it highly probable that the rebuilding and establishment of St. Frideswide's by Æthelred II., A.D. 1002, was the real starting-point, and that Oxford grew up and clustered, as it were, around that old foundation, which has now a still more valuable existence in the House of Christ Church. (See Nos. 28 to 31 in the Guide.)

* Leland suggested that as Osney is derived from Ousen-cy, Oxen-ford might properly be Ousen-ford; but this theory has never gained any general acceptance. The City arms and seal are of the twelfth century, and the shield would hardly have been charged with an Ox or Bull in ignorance of the real origin of the city's name. Moreover the Abbey of Osney (the derivation of this name is undisputed) bore on the lower part of their great seal the Oxford Bull, marking the distinction between Oxena-ford and Ousen-cy. Some philologists of eminence in the present day are nevertheless more inclined to get our name from Ouse than from Ox.

BISHOP KING'S PALACE.

Oxford was included in the Diocese of Lincoln until the time of Henry VIII., who, in compensation for the spoliation of so many monasteries, projected the erection of several new bishoprics.

Peterborough and Oxford were taken out of Lincoln ; and Robert King, the last Abbot of Oseney, was made the first Bishop, and the see of Oxford was fixed at Oseney, or Osney, in the western suburbs of the city. An old house still remaining in St. Aldate's, with quaintly carved ornaments, as represented in our illustration, is shown as the residence of this prelate. He was Bishop of Osney from 1542 to 1546, when King Henry, by letters patent of November 4th, transferred the see to his College in Oxford, which he re-established under the mixed form of a cathedral and academic college ; and the Bishop of this diocese has since that year been styled Bishop of Oxford. (See pages 64, 66, 71.)

The city was burnt by the Danes in 979, and again in the year 1032. In 1036 Harold Harefoot was crowned here. In 1066 the Norman Conquest took place, and William of Normandy became King ; and we pass from the distant time when the Mercian kings ruled, or the Wittenagemotes of our Saxon ancestors were held here, and may summarize our history in the statement that in no age since the Conquest has Oxford, both as city and University, been otherwise than one of the most important places in England.

We will now attempt, as briefly as may be, to give some account of the interesting remains of the fortifications with which this city was formerly surrounded.

To begin with the Castle (see 69 in Guide), we may say that the original plan and extent of it can hardly now be made out. The New Road is cut right through the outer "bailey," and the site of the Canal Wharf is part of it. The old tower which remains of the Castle built by Robert D'Oyly in the time of the Conqueror,* was probably a prison tower in the wall of the outer bailey, and not the "keep," as was formerly supposed. A "mount" is a common appendage to a Norman castle, formed of the earth dug out in making the ditch, and the summit served as a look-out place, commonly protected by a wooden palisade, and sometimes had a building on the top of it. In the centre of the Oxford mount a well was sunk and a well room made in the time of Henry III., when the sum of £19 19s. was expended on it, equivalent to nearly £400 of our money. There was a small church and college of priests, called St. George's College, within the Castle. The stately towers of the Castle, which were a great ornament to that part of the city, were standing until the time of Colonel Ingoldsby, the governor, when, in 1649, the Parliament had them pulled down. They were four in number, besides the one on the gate.

OXFORD CASTLE.

* See illustration, also description (No. 69) in the Guide.—[ED.]

The City Walls were built in the reign of Henry III., and about a century after their erection, in the reign of Edward III., 1370, we find mention of a grant from the Abbot of Osney towards their repair. The plan is the usual one of that period,—a curtain wall, with an alure or walk on the top, protected by a parapet and round towers—or bastions, as they are conveniently called—at regular and short intervals. The staircases were probably in these bastion towers, and the last of them may be seen in the part of the wall surrounding New College Gardens (12), where the straight staircases from the alure to the towers remain. It is here that the walls may be best seen, as William of Wykeham obtained permission to include the lane within the wall in the ground of his New College, on condition that he repaired the wall, and that his college should keep it in perpetual repair. Starting from this portion of the wall, its line may be traced to High street, where the East Gate stood, and then again round Merton (26). The portion that passed from thence to Christ Church (28) has long since been pulled down. Starting also from New College towards the westward, the wall may be traced first in the remains of the little chapel of St. Margaret* (which stood by one of the small gates called Smith's Gate), near the site of the present Clarendon Building (7); then its line may be found in old bastions and the line of the ditch behind the houses opposite Balliol College (60).

* The hexagonal Chapel near Smith's Gate has been called improperly St. Catharine's (hence "St. Catharine's Club"). This name was adopted in his Membrials of Oxford by Dr. Ingram, who supposed that the mutilated sculpture over the doorway represented the Marriage of St. Catharine. The sculpture, however, may be seen to represent the Annunciation, and the Chapel was always known as "Our Lady's Chapel." Cat street and Cat (or Smith's) Gate were so called from St. Catharine's Hall, which stood where Hertford College stands.—Vide Peshall's Wood, pp. 72-75. Leonard Hutten says it was first a Jews' synagogue; then an oratory dedicated to St. Margaret.—Vide Hearne's "Textus Roffensis," &c., page 364. Antony a Wood held this also, and it would in former days be known probably as the Chapel of Our Lady and St. Margaret.

It crossed the Corn Market by St. Michael's Church (66), is traceable by New-Inn-Hall street and Bullock's (improperly named Bulwarks) Alley ; and faint traces here and there in "the Friars" and St. Ebbe's parish complete the circuit to South Gate.

To trace the walls we should bear in mind the position of the old Gates. The East Gate was across the High street, close to the corner of King street, leading to Merton ; the South Gate was across St. Aldate's, close to the south-west corner of Christ Church ; the West Gate was in Castle street, beyond the old church of St. Peter-le-Bailey, which was in the bailey (ballium) or outer court of the Castle. The North Gate house was called "Bocardo." Here the three martyred prelates were allowed to meet and take their meals together in the room above the arch, and from this gate they passed out to their death by fire, which took place outside the City wall, opposite the entrance of Balliol College (60). In those days there were few, if any, houses here ; and the whole of the present Broad street, and the ground on which the houses stand, formed a considerable open space, known as Can-ditch. This name comes from the "candida fossa," or clear running stream, made to flow all along the North side, which was more unprotected than the others. Before Can-ditch, this part was called Horsemonger street, Henry I. having granted to the Prior of St. Frideswide the right of holding a horse fair there.

* As seen from the North or outer side of the wall. Our publishing house occupies the site of the bastion shown on the right. A view from the South side is given on page 125.

With the removal of the gates and the formation of the New Market about a century ago, the names of many streets have been changed. But St. Peter's-in-the-East, St. Peter's-le-Bailey, and St. Michael's at North Gate, still retain their titles, though St. Michael's at South Gate was pulled down to build Wolsey's College : it stood close to the gate, on the ground now occupied by the residence of the Professor of Hebrew. St. Peter guarded the East and West, St. Michael the North and South, as is expressed in the ancient distich :—

"Invigilat portæ Australi Boreæque Michael, Exortum solem Petrus regit atque cadentem."

"The North and South Gates St. Michael doth guard,
The East and West St. Peter's care doth ward."

The Corn-Market had formerly a shed down the middle of the street for the protection of the dealers, with a leaden roof supported on stone columns. The shambles were in the middle of Butcher-row (now Queen street), and that name and the Butter-bench, still often heard, mark the sites of open markets. But the condition of the streets on market days in early ages, and before 1770, may be conceived, when we remember that up and down the High street, and the smaller streets branching out of it, were told off stations for each condition of sellers of wood and straw with their teams; sellers of faggots and fuel in carts and waggons; timber merchants; sellers of hops and swine, beer and ale; drapers; sellers of roots and coals; seller of gloves and whitawyers; bakers, furriers, linen and woollen drapers, tanners, sellers of butter, cheese, milk, eggs, and corn.

CARFAX CONDUIT.

We conclude these brief notes with some specimens of the old nomenclature of well-known localities. Carfax was Quatrevois (see X in the Plan). Here in 1610 a picturesque structure was erected as a Conduit for the water supply. In 1787 it was taken down and removed to Nuneham Park, near Oxford, where it still stands, as represented in our engraving. All Saints' Church (65) was All Hallows; the Botanic Garden (16) the Jews' Cemetery; Magdalen Bridge, East Bridge or Petty Pont; the Turl, Silver Street; Brasenose Lane, St. Mildred's Street; Oriel Street was Schydyard Street; Magpie Lane was Grope Lane, or by some called Winking Lane, from Wynkin de Worde having had his printing-press there.

The first part of the Henley and Cowley roads was Campus Fields; Corn-Market Street was North Gate Street; Market Street was Cheney Lane; Ship Street was Summer Street; Broad Street was Can-ditch; Trinity College (61), Durham Hall; a house of Augustine Friars occupied the site of Wadham College (8); Gloucester Green was Broken Hayes; Friars' Entry was the road to the Priory of the Carmelite or White Friars, who succeeded to the Beaumont Palace ground; Queen Street was Butcher Row; Adelaide Street and Penson's Gardens stand on the gardens of the Franciscan Friars; Paradise Street was West Gate; Fisher Row, Wareham Bank; St. Aldate's was South Street or Fish

Street. The range of building opposite the S. end of Christ Church was known as Segrim's Tenements; Pembroke College (33) was Broadgates Hall; and on the ground from Commercial road to Abbey place (still called "The Friars"), where now the gas works stand, stood the monasteries of the Franciscan or Grey, and the

FRIAR BACON'S STUDY.

Dominican or Black Friars. Folly Bridge was called Grand Pont; our engraving represents the Tower known as Friar Bacon's Study, which stood on the old bridge until the year 1779. (See p. 71.)

It is impossible to do more than indicate the many objects of interest to those who can spend a little time in our old city; and we will only remind them that in the time of Charles I. the whole place was girt with earthwork lines of defence,* of which there are now left only a few traces in the shape of green grassy mounds, such as may be seen

* The plan of these works on page 133 is a reduced copy of one in Skelton's Oxonia Antiqua, said to be a fac-simile from Antony à Wood. It is reproduced here by kind permission of the late Gen. RIGAUD, from his interesting pamphlet on the Lines Round Oxford, 1642—1646 (Oxford: W. R. Bowden).—[ED.]

close to the river beyond Holywell Church. The fortifications were commenced about April, 1643, and for two or three years were worked at till completed; but on June 20th, 1646, a treaty for the surrender of Oxford was concluded, and on June 24th the city was surrendered to the Parliamentarians. The Royalists

FORTIFICATIONS ROUND OXFORD, 1642—1646.

A—St. Giles' Church. B—Holywell Church. C—Magdalen Bridge.
D—Grand Pont (Folly Bridge). E—St. Thomas' Church. F—Oxford Castle.

marched out through a guard of the enemy, extending from St. Clement's to Shotover Hill, armed, with colours flying and drums beating; Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice, with the "people of quality," having previously left the city.

That Oxford should have been given up, instead of standing a siege, is now a matter for happy reflection; and it is enough for us to know that Sir Thomas Fairfax chose Headington Hill as the site of a "very strong and great work" or entrenchment, of capacity to receive and lodge three thousand men; that a bridge was thrown over the Cherwell at Marston, and a strong post made on the north side; that at one time Fairfax had his head-quarters at Marston, Oliver Cromwell at Wytham, and Major Browne at Wolvercote; that at another period the Parliament head-quarters were at Holton; that there one of Oliver's daughters was married to Ireton; and that in 1644 the Earl of Essex and Sir W. Waller came with their forces from Abingdon over Sandford Ferry, and so through Cowley and over Bullingdon Green en route for Islip.* And we may be thankful that our own lot was not cast in the "good old times;" for the Oxford of to-day will be found a far pleasanter place of sojourn than the Oxford of the troubled times of the Civil War, or those of William and Mary, Anne, or any one of the Georges.

G. R.

* It was on May 29th—the Eve of the Ascension, and Charles I. went out on the top of Magdalen Tower to watch the troops of Essex as they crossed over Bullingdon.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

IN THE PRESENT EDITION OF

ALDEN'S OXFORD GUIDE.

Arms of the City and University	Page vii
North Gate and Bocardo, from the North	1
Broad Street (Clarendon, Sheldonian, Exeter College)	2
The Sheldonian Theatre	4
The Divinity School (interior)	7
The Schools Tower of Five Orders	9
Duke Humphrey's Library, Bodleian	11
The Picture Gallery, Bodleian Library	13
Wadham College, The Arms of	14
The University Museum, Statue of Lord Bacon in	16
Keble College, Arms of	18
Keble College Gateway	19
New College, Entrance Gateway	20
New College Cloisters, Bell Tower, and West end of Chapel	22
New College, The Founder's Pastoral Staff and Jewel	24
St. Edmund Hall, The Arms of	26
The New Examination Schools	28
Magdalen College and Bridge, from the Cherwell	30
Magdalen College, Open-Air Pulpit	32
Magdalen College, West Doorway of Chapel	33
Magdalen College, remains of Old Magdalen Hall	34
Magdalen College Cloisters, Chapel, Founder's Tower, &c.	36
The High Street (St. Mary's, Univ., All Souls, B.N.C., and All Saints)	38
St. Mary-the-Virgin's Church and All Souls College	41
St. Mary-the-Virgin's Church, The Porch	45
The "Camera," from St. Mary's Entry	47
Brasenose College, The Arms of	48
Brasenose College and Radcliffe Library	49
Oriental College Dining Hall	51
Corpus Christi College, Quadrangle	53
Corpus Christi College, Bishop Fox's Pastoral Staff	54
Merton College, Arms of	55
Merton College Gateway	56
Merton College Chapel, from the East	58
Christ Church Meadow	60
Christ Church, Boat Club Barges, on the Isis	61
Christ Church, Arms of	62
Christ Church Cathedral (exterior)	63
Christ Church Cathedral, Latin Chapel (interior)	65
Christ Church, Dining Hall (interior)	67
Christ Church, Great Quadrangle	69
Christ Church, Tom Tower	71
Pembroke College, Arms of	72

	Page
New Road Chapel	74
Union Society's Library and Reading Room	76
Y.M.C.A. Rooms	78
Worcester College, In the Gardens	79
Worcester College, Arms of	80
Worcester College, Old Houses	81
Medley	83
St. John's College, Arms of	87
St. John's College, Garden Front	88
St. John's College, Window in Garden Front	89
The Taylor Institution	91
King Alfred's Jewel and Henry VIII.'s Sword, 93; Guy Fawkes' Lantern	94
The Randolph Hotel	95
The Martyrs' Memorial and Balliol College	97
Balliol College, Master's House	98
Balliol College, Old Hall and Library	99
Balliol College, Arms of	100
Balliol College, New Dining Hall	101
Balliol College, Chapel and Library	102
Trinity College, Arms of	103
Trinity College, President's House	103
Trinity College, The Gateway	104
Exeter College, Arms of	105
Lincoln College, Arms of	107
Mansfield College, Porch of Chapel	113
Manchester College, Front	114
Folly Bridge, 117; The River Isis	118
Iffley Church (two views), 119; Iffley Mill	120
Nuneham Cottages, 121; Nuneham Bridge	122
Steamer passing Iffley Mill	123
Bocardo, North Gate, from the South	125
Bishop King's Palace, St. Aldate's	128
Oxford Castle	130
Bocardo, North Gate, from the North	132
Carfax Conduit, Nuneham Park	134
Friar Bacon's Study, Grandpont	136
Plan of the Old Fortifications	137
General View of Oxford, from the G.W.R.	138

TWELVE PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS.

	To face page		To face page
1. Magdalen Tower	(Frontispiece)	7. Oriel College	51
2. Keble College Chapel	18	8. Ch. Ch. Cathedral (interior)	64
3. New College, from Gardens	23	9. Balliol College, S. Front	98
4. In New College Gardens	25	10. Exeter College Library	106
5. The High Street	37	11. Manchester College Library	116
6. All Souls College	42	12. Nuneham	122

TRIPS ON THE RIVER THAMES.

Saloon Steamers

RUN AS UNDER DURING THE SUMMER BETWEEN OXFORD AND KINGSTON.

DOWN TRIP.—OXFORD to HENLEY every Week Day.
HENLEY to KINGSTON every Week Day.
UP TRIP.—KINGSTON to HENLEY every Week Day.
HENLEY to OXFORD every Week Day.

Fares: Oxford to Kingston, 14/6; Return, 25/.

Oxford to Henley, 7/6; Henley to Kingston, 7/6.

Intermediate, 3d. per mile. Minimum, 1/.

Cheap combined Steamer and Railway Tickets are issued for a variety of trips at the principal G.W.R. Stations.

* * * Illustrated Steamer Guide and Time-Table, post free, 1d.

BOATS OF ALL KINDS

For Excursions down the River, at charges which include cartage back to Oxford.
Full particulars on application.

STEAM LAUNCHES TO LET BY THE DAY OR TRIP.

A large Stock of New and Second-hand Boats of all classes for Sale.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

SALTER BROS., Folly Bridge, Oxford.

Roebuck Hotel.

(See page 109 in the Guide.)

J. AUSTIN DRAYTON, Proprietor.

This First-Class Family and Commercial Hotel is most conveniently situated for Commercial Gentlemen, Tourists, and Boating Parties.

Lighted by Electricity. Dark Room for Photographers.

Visitors will find every comfort and attention with moderate tariff.

LADIES' COFFEE ROOM. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Billiard Room (two tables). Large Stock Rooms. Good Stabling NIGHT PORTER.

May Morning on the Magdalen Tower.

AN interesting Souvenir of this ceremony.

See page 35

IN ALDEN'S
OXFORD GUIDE.

—♦—
A BOOKLET
containing :
The Latin Words of the "Hymnus Eucharisticus," with the Music by BEN ROGERS (College Organist in 1685)
as sung on the Tower; also

The English Translation by the late Very Rev. DEAN BURGON, together with his beautiful Poem,

"May Morning on Magdalen Tower,"

With Four Illustrations. Price 6d. post free.

OXFORD : ALDEN & CO. LTD., 35, CORN-MARKET STREET.

THE UNDERMENTIONED WORKS

RELATING TO

OXFORD

ARE KEPT IN STOCK BY

Alden & Co. Ltd., Booksellers,

35, CORN-MARKET STREET, OXFORD.

- The Colleges of Oxford: their History and Traditions. Twenty-one chapters by Members of the Colleges. Edited by ANDREW CLARK, M.A. 12s. 6d.
- Oxford and Her Colleges. A view from the Radcliffe Library. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L. 3s.
- Oxford and Oxford Life. Nine Chapters on Oxford in the Past and Present: Expenses; Intellectual Life; Social Life; Religious Life; Aids to Study; Women's Education; and University Extension. Edited by J. WELLS, M.A., Wadham College. 3s. 6d.
- Aspects of Modern Oxford. By a Mere Don: with illustrations. 6s.
- Rixæ Oxoniensis: Historic Sketches of the Conflicts between "Town and Gown." By S. F. HULTON, New College. With six illustrations of demolished Oxford buildings. Crown 8vo, 5s.
- Oxford and Cambridge; their Colleges, Memories, and Associations. By the Rev. F. ARNOLD, B.A., late of Christ Church. 4to, illustrated, 10s.
- Oxford. Brief Historical and Descriptive Notes. By ANDREW LANG, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College. With forty illustrations, cloth, 6s.
- Oxford. By C. W. BOASE, M.A., Fellow of Exeter College ("Historic Towns" Series, edited by Dr. E. A. FREEMAN). With maps, 3s. 6d.
- Oxford. By the Rev. E. MARSHALL, M.A., F.S.A. ("Diocesan Histories" Series.) With maps, 2s. 6d.
- A History of the University of Oxford. By the Hon. G. C. BRODRICK, D.C.L., Warden of Merton College ("Epochs of Church History" Series,) 2s. 6d.
- The Oxford Museum. By HENRY W. ACLAND, M.D. and JOHN RUSKIN M.A. Reprinted and enlarged, 1893. With plates, 4s. net.
- Costumes of the Members of the University of Oxford. A Series of Coloured Plates, from Photographs, on sheet folded in case, 2s. 6d.
- The Arms of the Colleges, emblazoned in gold and colours, on sheet. 2s.
- The Student's Handbook of the University and Colleges. Revised edition, 2s. 6d.
- The University Calendar, officially published annually. 6s.
- Guide to Blenheim. Illustrated. 6d.
- Tom Brown at Oxford. By THOMAS HUGHES, cheaper edition, 3s. 6d.
- Mr. Verdant Green, an Oxford Freshman. With illustrations, 3s. and 3s. 6d.
- Either of these works sent post free on receipt of its published price.*

VISITORS

WILL FIND EVERY ACCOMMODATION AT THE

OXFORD RESTAURANT

107, HIGH STREET,

(Exactly opposite the new Gateway Tower of Brasenose College)

AND AT THE

CENTRAL REFRESHMENT ROOMS,

CARFAX.

PROPRIETOR:

ALFRED BOFFIN,

Cook, Confectioner,

AND FOREIGN WINE MERCHANT.

DESSERTS, ICES, &c. SOUPS, JELLIES, AND ENTREES

Supplied on the Shortest Notice.

Richly Ornamented Bride Cakes, carefully Packed and sent to any part of the Country.

Estimates given for Wedding Breakfasts, Ball Suppers, &c.
PLATE, GLASS, CUTLERY, &c., LENT ON HIRE.

Alden's Oxford Guide.—Advertisements.

S. ALDATE'S BOARDING HOUSE, 95 & 96, S. ALDATE'S STREET, OXFORD.

Central situation, opposite Christ Church (The Cathedral), and within ten minutes of any of the Colleges. Trams pass the door to and from the River.

BOARD AND RESIDENCE,

From 25s. to 2 guineas per week, or 6s. per day.

Tariff Card on application.

Proprietress - - - C. A. BRICE.

No. 14. Jan. 21, 1893.

The Isis 6d.

Oxford:
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED FOR THE PROPRIETORS BY ALDEN & CO., LTD., BOCARDO PRESS,
15, CORN MARKET STREET

The Isis: the popular Undergraduate Weekly. Every Sat. in Term, 6d.

New Books of Oxford Humour.

Just published, 2/6 nett.

Two on a Tour: and other papers from the Isis. By MOSTYN T. PIGOTT, M.A., B.C.L.

Also by the same author, and at the same price,

Common-Room Carols: and other Verses and Parodies, chiefly relating to Oxford.

A Souvenir of Oxford.

Demy 8vo, hf-parchment antique, 5/. (cash 4/2).

In College Groves: and other Oxford Verses. By H. A. MORRAH, St. John's College.

ALDEN & Co. Ltd., 35, Corn-Market Street, Oxford.

Alden's Oxford Guide.—Advertisements.

CITY AND COUNTY DEPOSITORY.

SAUNDERS & CO.,

MILRE OFFICE, HIGH STREET, Agents to the Great Western Railway Company, Furniture Removers and Storers, undertake to pack Gentlemen's Books, Pictures, Luggage, &c.

GOOD WAREHOUSES.

ESTIMATES FREE.

ABINGDON. Crown & Thistle Hotel.

Visitors to Abingdon will find this Old-established Hotel replete with every comfort, and from its close proximity to River and Railway Station most convenient for

FAMILIES, BOATING PARTIES, AND COMMERCIAL GENTLEMEN.

Large Coffee Room, Commercial Room, and Suites of Apartments.

BILLIARDS. POST HORSES AND CARRIAGES.

STEAM LAUNCH FOR HIRE.

H. W. GOUGH, Proprietor.

THE "CASTLE" Temperance Commercial & Family Hotel, FACING THE G. W. AND L. & N. W. STATIONS. OXFORD.

Every accommodation for Commercial Gentlemen, Bicyclists, Tourists, &c. Good Sunday House. Large Commercial Room.

Charges strictly Moderate.

Bath Rooms, Private Sitting Rooms, &c.

Tram Cars leave for all parts of the City every five minutes.

W. LUDLOW, Proprietor.

ESTABLISHED 1832.

WORKS REBUILT 1885.

Bocardo Press, Oxford.

Opposite St. Michael's at North Gate.

ALDEN & CO. LTD., Printers and Publishers of this Guide, respectfully invite the attention of Authors, Publishers, and the general public, to the facilities afforded at their old-established Printing Office for the satisfactory execution of every description of Book-Work in the best style, as well as all kinds of commercial and general Printing, under direct personal supervision. The greatest care is taken to ensure accuracy and punctuality in the fulfilment of orders.

The Managing Director (Mr. F. C. ALDEN) has received numerous high-class Testimonials, copies of which he will gladly forward on application.

Four doors south of the central point (marked O in the Plan) referred to in the first page of the Guide. See also page 110.

THE GEORGE HOTEL, OXFORD.

Centrally situated at the Corner of Corn-Market and George Street, and Close to the New Theatre.

(Marked O in the Key Plan, see page 1 of Guide.)

VISITORS, EXCURSIONISTS, BOATING PARTIES, ETC.

Will find every comfort and good attendance at the above Hotel, combined with moderate charges.

The Hotel is fitted with the Electric Light.

First-Class Billiard Rooms, Stabling, &c.

A. H. MILLOY, Proprietor.

Quality our Leading Feature.

VISITORS

WILL FIND EVERY ACCOMMODATION FOR

LIGHT REFRESHMENTS

AT

G. H. COOPER'S,

8, MAGDALEN STREET,

Opposite St. Mary Magdalene Church,

(No. 59 in the Guide.)

TEA, COFFEE, COCOA,

MINERAL WATERS, ICES,

AND ALL KINDS OF

CONFECTIONERY.

Large Assortment of Chocolates.

SOLE AGENT FOR SMITHS PATENT

GERM BREAD.

Best White and Whole Meal Bread. Finest Pastry Flour.

All goods manufactured by the most recent Machinery at

G. H. COOPER'S HYGIENIC BAKERY.

Dr. J. R. MILLER'S WORKS.

COME YE APART. Daily Readings in the Life of Christ.

Large Imperial 16mo. Printed on antique laid paper, and handsomely bound.

Price 3s. 6d.

"The readings, . . . we suspect, will go a long way in many a quiet life towards the deepening of faith, the brightening of hope, and the kindling of charity.—Speaker.

"A precious book; to be kept."—Written in Mr. Spurgeon's handwriting in his copy of "Come Ye Apart."

SPECIAL PRESENTATION EDITION.

With 13 original drawings, illustrating the months, by CHARLES ROBINSON. Printed in Red and black, bound in padded paste grain, round corners, gilt roll, red under gold edges, in box. Price 10s. 6d.

Uniform with above.

WEEK-DAY RELIGION.

Imperial 16mo. Price 3s. 6d. Dark blue cloth. This is, next to "Come Ye Apart," Dr. Miller's most popular work. Over 30,000 have been sold in America and this country.

THE BUILDING OF CHARACTER. Familiar Talks on Christian Living.

Imperial 16mo. Price 3s. 6d.

"Written with simple directness, with courage and tenderness, and with a wide outlook on life and literature. . . . He writes like a man who understands the inner aspects of the battle and burden of life as it presents itself to those who have not discarded their ideals or lost their aspirations."—Speaker.

THE PERFECT HOME. Some Chapters on Home-making.

Fcap 8vo, cloth boards, gilt top. Price 2s.

"It is written with judgment and tact, as well as sense and sensibility. . . . Will often find a place among wedding presents."—Speaker.

27TH THOUSAND.

THE TRANSFIGURED LIFE. Some Hints for Making Shining Lives.

48 pp., Crown 8vo, beautifully bound in electric blue leatherette, gilt top. Price 6d.

MARY OF BETHANY.

Crown 8vo, beautifully bound in electric blue leatherette, gilt top. Price 6d.

THE DEW OF THY YOUTH. An Address to Young People.

Uniform with "Mary of Bethany." Price 6d.

THE "COME YE APART" BIRTHDAY BOOK.

Selected from the Writings of J. R. MILLER, D.D., Author of "Come Ye Apart," etc. 272 pp., Crown 16mo, cloth boards, gilt edges. Price 1s 6d., or handsomely bound in padded paste grain, round corners, gilt roll, red under gold. Price 2s. 6d.

THE ETHICS OF GAMBLING.

By Rev. W. DOUGLAS MACKENZIE, M.A. Demy 12mo, cloth boards, gilt top. Price 1s.

LONDON: SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION, 57 & 59, LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

OXFORD DEPÔT: ALDEN & Co. LTD., 35, CORN-MARKET STREET.

Oxford Books for Tourists.

Patronised by H.R.H. the late Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, K.G.

New Edition (Fifty-third Thousand) now ready.

ALDEN'S OXFORD GUIDE. Originally written and annually revised by EDWARD C. ALDEN. With Key-Plan and numerous illustrations. Price Sixpence.
Enlarged edition, with Appendix, coloured map, and several full-page Plates, One Shilling.

"A surprisingly good book."—Christian World.

"A Model Guide."—Publishers' Circular.

"Your admirable little Guide."—Sir Henry Acland, K.C.B., F.R.S.

(See scores of Published Testimonials.)

Under the auspices of the O. U. B. C.

THE ROADS ROUND OXFORD: an Original Description of the Main Roads and Bye-Roads within a Radius of 25 miles; with the Mileage of Longer Routes. By W. J. TURRELL, M.D., and H. GRAVES (Ball. Coll.), with Map by B. V. DARBISHIRE, B.A. Price 1s.

"The directions are clear, methodical, concise, and practical."—Times

SALTER'S GUIDE TO THE RIVER THAMES, from its Source to Putney; the Rivers Avon, Severn, Wye, Trent, and Ouse, and Principal Canals. With Maps, Illustrations, Tables of Distances, and a variety of Information useful to Boating Parties, Tourists, Anglers, &c. Sixth Edition, price 1s.; post free, 1s. 3d.

SALTER'S NEW MAP OF THE RIVER THAMES, from its Source to Putney. With Tables of Distances. In two sections, folded in wrapper, price Sixpence.

CHIPPING NORTON, Notes on the History of. By A. BALLARD, B.A., LL.B. Demy 8vo. Price Sixpence.

FAIRFORD CHURCH AND ITS WINDOWS, A Handbook to. By Rev. F. R. CARBONELL, M.A. With Plan and View of the Church. Price Sixpence.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY

ALDEN & CO. LTD., OXFORD.

Alden's Oxford Guide.—Advertisements.

HILLS AND SAUNDERS,
Photographers to Her Majesty,
CORN-MARKET STREET, OXFORD,
Opposite the Clarendon Hotel.

A VERY LARGE SELECTION OF VIEWS
in all sizes : both in the ordinary and Platinotype process.

PORTRAITS OF OXFORD CELEBRITIES.

WILLIAM H. ALDEN,

(Late THOMAS ALDEN)

UNIVERSITY & FAMILY BUTCHER,
1 & 2, MARKET, OXFORD.

SUPERIOR PORK, CORNED BEEF, AND PICKLED TONGUES.

Families regularly Waited upon for Orders.

ROBERT R. ALDEN,

LATE THOS. ALDEN,

University and Family Butcher,

17, 18, & 19, MARKET, OXFORD.

(Corner of Third and South Avenues.)

Pickled Beef and Ox Tongues in prime condition.

FAMILIES REGULARLY WAITED UPON FOR ORDERS.

THE WORLD-WIDE ATLAS.

A WONDERFUL PRODUCTION.

CONTAINING 2 Frontispieces—The Flags of all Nations and the Time of all Nations Introduction—Geographical Discovery and Political Territorial Changes in the Nineteenth Century, by J. SCOTT KELTIE, Assistant Secretary to the Royal Geographical Society, London; 112 beautifully Coloured and thoroughly accurate Plates of Maps, Plans of Cities, etc.; Index of 86 pages, giving 58,000 Names.

Handsomely bound in Cloth, royal 4to, $12\frac{3}{4}$ by $10\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Price 7s. 6d.

Complete Catalogue of Atlases, Maps, Globes, Wall Illustrations, etc., posted free to any address

W. & A. K. JOHNSTON

(Established 1825),

Geographers to the Queen, Educational and General Publishers,

Edina Works, Easter Road, and 7, South Hanover Street, EDINBURGH.

5, White Hart Street, Warwick Lane, LONDON, E.C.

Bodleian

Note,

IVORY SURFACED,

Five Quires for One Shilling.

ENVELOPES TO MATCH.

Special Lines in 1s. Cabinets.

The favourite "BODLEIAN" is sold in Oxford only by ALDEN & COMPANY Ltd., 35, Corn-Market St.

The Shilling Packet for 10½d. cash.

The Envelopes 10½d. per 100 cash.

MARTYR'S

(Late IRWIN'S)

HAIR-CUTTING ROOMS

FOR

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

CORNER OF

BROAD STREET & CORN-MARKET,
OXFORD.

(Marked O on Plan.)

GAMMON, WICKS & Co.,

(LATE GUY & GAMMON)

FREWEN COURT, CORN-MARKET STREET,

Adjoining the Union Society's Rooms,

OXFORD.

IMPORTERS OF AND DEALERS IN

WINES, SPIRITS, AND LIQUEURS.

(See page 109.)

ALDEN & CO. LTD., PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS, 35, CORN-MARKET STREET, OXFORD.

Some Testimonials.

From PROFESSOR R. G. MOULTON, M.A., Cantab., PH.D. Penn., late Cambridge University Extension Lecturer, Author of "The Ancient Classical Drama," &c.

"Cambridge, Jan. 9th, 1892.

"A considerable portion of my University Extension Syllabuses has been printed by Messrs. ALDEN & Co., of the Bocardo Printing Works, Oxford. This printing (which was somewhat elaborate) has been throughout executed in superior style, and with signs of highly intelligent supervision at headquarters. I have found the terms of the Company moderate, and business relations with their representatives uniformly pleasant.

"R. G. MOULTON."

From PROFESSOR FRANCIS GOTCH, F.R.S. ; M.A. Oxon. ; B.A., B.Sc.
Lond. ; Waynflete Professor of Physiology in the University of Oxford.

"Aug. 7th, 1891.

"Many thanks for copies of Testimonials, which are very satisfactory. The printing and general get-up was very much admired by many of my friends.

"FRANCIS GOTCH."

From H. LLEWELLYN SMITH, Esq., M.A., Corpus Christi Coll., B.Sc. Lond. ; Labour Commissioner of the Board of Trade.

"49, Beaumont Square, London, E.

"DEAR SIR,

"Nov. 12th, 1891.

"The Syllabuses you printed for my lectures at the Oxford Extension Meeting last year were in every way most satisfactory, which is the more creditable seeing that they were in part produced without my revision, and contained matter of a technical description.

"Yours faithfully,

"Mr. E. C. ALDEN.

"H. LLEWELLYN SMITH."

From HERBERT A. MORRAH, Esq., St. John's College, Oxford.

"The Piccadilly Club, W.

"Dec. 18th, 1893.

"... In my opinion the care and attention which you have given to the publication of the book, the great judgment you have exercised, and the success which you have attained in producing a very handsome volume, are all deserving of the very highest praise.

"Yours sincerely,

"Mr. E. C. ALDEN.

"HERBERT A. MORRAH."

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,
H.R.H. Prince Leopold,
Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia.

Their Imperial Majesties
Emperor & Empress of Brazil,
Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte
&c., &c.

Clarendon Hotel.

THE COUNTY AND UNIVERSITY HOUSE,

"Known to former generations as 'THE STAR.'"—Alden's Guide, p. 109.

Is situated in the most central part of the City, and is near to the principal Colleges, River, and places of interest.

THE BEST TABLE D'HÔTE IN OXFORD

Served every evening at Seven o'clock.

IRREPROACHABLE CUISINE.

CAREFULLY SELECTED CELLARS OF WINE.

Families and Gentlemen will find this Hotel replete with every comfort.

Assembly Room 70ft. x 40ft. for Banquets, Concerts, &c.

Billiard, Grill, and Smoking Rooms. Spacious Drawing Room

Private Bed and Sitting Rooms en suite.

Ventilation and Sanitary arrangements perfect.

Posting in all its Branches.

REDUCED TARIFF. BOARDING TERMS ARRANGED.

Under the personal management of the Proprietor,

SIDNEY M. BURLS.

